Corrected Facts of the Priceville Post Office and Town Plot

Editor Advance:

Dear Sir:—Your issue of April 14, contained a short history of the organization of Priceville Post Office, and settlement of town plot, in which I find several errors.

When the Glenelg and Artemesia townships were survyed, Lot 34, 1st Con North, Glenelg, and Lots 1 to 5, South and Northo of Durham Road Artemesia, were reserved for a town Rivre. The 50 acre lots on this so-River. The 50 acre lots on this so called "Durham Road," were granted to settlers who would build a small house , and clear a few acres. Many colored people living along the southern border of Ontario, who had previously escaped from plantations in the Southern States of Maryland, Virginia, and other places, were attracted by this free offer of land, and settled on nearly all lots between the village survey, and east along the Durham Road to the Toronto Line Ranges.

In 1851 Wm. Ferguson of Orillia came to the scene and secured Lots 6 and 7, First South, and 6, Con 1, North, Artemesia, and in 1852 a postoffice was being organized under act, with W. Ferguson as Post Master, under the government of Lower Canada. The Post Master's salary for the next year was ten shillings ($2.50.) There was some discussion about the name of the Postoffice and Town Plot—some while settlers proposed "Groves End," but the colored faction having the majority, called the name Priceville, after the engineer, Price, who surveyed the town plot . I cannot vouch for the current story that Mr. Price had been active in the scheme of smuggling the runaway slaves across the Niagara River to "Queen Victoria's Country," which scheme was nicknamed, "The Underground Railway." Upon certain signals given in the dark of night, young men would slip quietly out on the river, and row across to the American shore, and sympathizers there would place the runaways in boats to be conveyed over to British soil. The blacks were generally very nervous for fear of capture, and the excitement of flight, until they were clear over the river, and some of them, realizing that they stood on British ground, would leap up in the air, and shout, "I'se free, I'se free." Engineer Price was a white man and had a camp on the village plot near the Saugeen. John McAuley of Caledon, a scotchman, built the next house in town, and made, and repaired boots and shoes. Others quickly followed, David Yeomans of Belleville brought up about a dozen Frenchmen, and camped on the Mill property for a couple of seasons, while clearing and cropping about 150 acres, hewing timber, and building saw mill, grist mill, and the dam on the Saugeen for power. A few season afterward, Jos. Diggs, the first colored man located in the village, a cooper by trade, who made a comfortable living, and when he died, left a nice little bank account.

Then in the early '60's many of the colored residents on the 1st concession, west and east of town sold their fifty acre farms, and some scattered to Owen Sound, Collingwood, and Ann Arbor, Michigan. Many others built log cabins along the two most northerly streets in town which caused that section of the village to be called "Little Africa."

W.M.S AND LADIES AID OF PRICEVILLE UNITED CHURCH

In spite of almost impassable roads a good attendance marked the monthly meeting of the W.M.S. and Ladies' Aid of St. Columba United Church, Priceville, held at the Manse on the afternoon of Wednesday, April 21. The meeting opened with a hymn and Scripture reading by the president of the W.M.S., Mrs. McCormacl. Prayer was offered by Mrs. R. W. Vause and sentence prayers by several members of the Society. Miss V. R. McMillan gave an interesting paper on "The Prayers of Oriental Christians," based from the chapter of the Study Book, and Mrs. Robt. Parslow read an article on "Everyday Thanksgiving." Two enjoyable musical numbers were given, a solo by Mrs. (Dr.) Blake, and a duet by Mrs. H. B. McLean and Miss Watson. Delegates were appointed to attend the meeting of the Grey Presbyterial held on Tuesday, April 27th in Owen Sound.

In the absence of the President, Mrs. L. McArthur, the Ladies' Aid convened with Mr. John Williamson in the chair, and several items of business were disposed of. Refreshments and a social half hour brought the afternoon to a close.

A REMARKABLE WILL

A unique will was filed last week for probate at the county building in London by the executors of the estate of the late William Northgraves, McGillivray township farmer, who died March 31st. Under the terms of the document, his widow and two daughters, Mary and Agnes, are bequeathed the two front rooms of the family dwelling on the farm, a bedroom together with one-third of the cellar, and last of all are granted the right to take and use water from the well. Another clause from the will directs that his son, William, and heirs, executors or administrators, shall from time to time supply deceased's wife and his daughters with good flour, meals and ready-cut fuel, all to be delivered free of charge. In the event of the daughters marrying, their interest in said rooms and cellar shall cease. The will disposes of estate valued at $21,000, divided between the widow, two sons and two daughters.

The one best way!

Each year there are more people you can sell. The finest kind of introduction to these new comers is to call them up on the telephone — by Local or Long Distance as the case may require.

Many merchants always call up a new customer by Long Distance before sending a salesman to see him. Think how much difference it makes in the kind of reception the salesman gets!

All around you, in outlying towns, are customers who will be as glad to have you call them by telephone as you will be to sell them. Don't overlook the one best way of winning and holding their friendship — the telephone.

BETTS — McMULLEN

St. John's United church parsonage, Flesherton, was the scene of a quiet but pretty wedding on Wednesday afternoon, April 28th, when Ella Lottie McMullen, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McMullen, Flesherton, became the bride of Mr. Francis L. Betts, one of Artemesia township's popular and prosperous young agriculturists, and youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Betts, Collingwood gravel, Rock Mills. The Rev. Wm. R. Clements officiated.

The only relatives present at the ceremony were two sisters of the groom, Mrs. C. Newell and Miss Mabel Betts.

The fair young bride looked sweet in a pretty frock of powder blue taffeta and black satin shoes. Shortly after the ceremony the happy young couple left on the afternoon train for a honeymoon trip to Toronto, the bride wearing a beautiful navy blue coat and rosebud hat.

The groom's gift to the bride was a handsome grey squirrel choker.

The young couple will reside on the farm on the Collingwood gravel. Their many friends join in wishing them a long, happy and prosperous voyage through life.

The Tragedy of Age

The approach of middle-age may be a tradgedy for women—It is any thing but that for a man. The advantage is all with a girl in early youth. However humble her sphere she is likely to have her hour of glory. The lean years for a man are those before 30 when he is painfully acquiring wisdom and a living Woman's star declines around the forties. Men are then at their best In old age, woman again has the advantage. There is always something for her to do, while men, leaving business, are likely to stagnate and rust. All this is but preliminary to a remark we heard by a citizen the other morning. "I woke this morning and heard my first robin of 1926. The ground was frozen and cold, but the bird was singing lustily. I have wondered how I would know when age began to creep on me. I believe it will be when the first robin of the spring doesn't tug at my heart."

I never knew Jones had twins." "My dear. He married a telephone girl, and of course she gave him the wrong number.
