An Old Lady's Evening Wish.

My wishes soar not very high,
Nor do they widely roam
These moderate wishes are confin'd
To comforts found at home.

Give me what enjoy so well—
A snug domestic scene;
And take my word, I fell myself
As happy as a Queen,

I'll tell you what I wish for now—
'Tis not a large desire;
I wish to sit at perfect ease,
Beside my evening fire.

I wish a friend or two would call,
To ask me how I do;
Then truly happy I should be,
And they'd be happy, too.

I'd set the tea things on the tray,
And we should all agree,
While taking ever-welcome cups
Of JOHN HILL'S wholesome tea.

The tea would gladden every heart,
And brighten every face;
And nothing more could we desire
In such a happy case.

With JOHN HILL'S Tea I always crown
The comforts of my home;
And when I can partake of this
My wishes seldom roam.

All goods delivered free (within the limits of the city) by our own waggons, and every attention will be paid to proper packing and delivery.

"Words and Their Uses"

From Richard Grant White's new volume, bearing the above title, we quote a few paragraphs, showing a nice sense of discrimination, founded on practical views of the subject:

"Aggravate"—The word should never be employed in reference to persons, as it means merely to add weight to—to make an evil more oppressive by insult. It is sometimes improperly used in the sense of irritate, as "I was much aggravated by his conduct."

"Balance" in the sense of rest, remainder, residue, remnant, is an abomination. Balance is metaphorically the difference between two sides of an account—the amount which is necessary to make one equal to the other. Yet we continually hear of the balance of this or that thing, even the balance of a congregation or of an army!

"Bountiful" is applicable only to persons. A giver may be bountiful, but his gift cannot—it should be called plentiful or large. "A bountiful slice is absurd.

"Fetch" expresses a double motion—first from and then toward the speaker; it is exacly equivalent to "go and bring," and ought not to be used in the sense of bring alone.

"Calculate," besides its sectional misuse for, "think" or "suppose," is sometimes, in the participle form calculated, put for "likely" or "apt;" "That nomination is calculated to injure the party." It is "calculated" (designed) to do no such thing, though it may be likely to.

"Citizen" should not be used except when the possession of political rights is meant to be implied. Newspaper reporters have a bad habit of bringing it out on all occasions when "person," "man" or "bystander" would express their meaning much better.

"Couple" applies to two things which are bound together or united in some way. "A couple of apples" is incorrect; "two" apples is what is meant.

"Dirt" means filth, and is synonymous with earth or soil. Yet people sometimes speak of a dirt road, or of packing dirt around the roots of trees they are setting. They mean earth.

"Execute." When a man is executed his sentence is executed, the man is not. A man cannot be executed—that is, followed out or performed.

"Expect" looks always to the future. You cannot expect that anything has happened or is happening, but only that it will happen.

"Get" means to obtain, not to possess. "He has got all the numbers of the Country Gentleman." "Have you got good molasses?" "they have got bad manners." Why will people persist in introducing the word in such sentences as these, where it is so evidently superfluous?

"Help meet."—An absurd use of these two words, as if they together were the name of one thing—a wife—is too common. The sentence in Genesis is: "I will make an help meet for him"—i. e. a help fit for him. There is no such word as helpmeet.

"Lie"—"Lay."—Persons not grossly ignorant sometimes say they will lay (meaning lie) down, that they have laid (lain) an hour, or that the hammer is laying [lying] by the tacks. Lie means to recline; its past tense is lay—"I lay there all night;" its participles lying and lain. Lay [used of present time] means to put something down—one lays a carpet; "I laid it my self;" its participles laying and laid—"I was interrupted while laying it, and it was not all laid till night."

"Love" rules the heart not the stomach. You love your wife, or ought to; but favorite articles of food you like.

"Observe" should not be used for say, as in the oft-heard sentence, "What did you observe?"

"Sit," often mispronounced set, is occasionally written so, but, it is to be hoped, rarely.

A Tragic Memory of Chiselhurst.

The visit paid by her Majesty to the ex-Empress at Camden Place, and the inspection by Eugenie of the Royal Artillery from Woolwich, when they halted the other day on Chiselhurst Common, have drawn attention once more to the English house of Royal Exile. There is one chapter in the history of Camden Place (of special interest to Scottish readers) which has apparently escaped the attention of all the newspaper writers—a fearful domestic tragedy which was enacted in what is now the abode of Eugenie nearly sixty years ago. The story is told on a tomb stone in the old parish burial ground, which lies on the edge of the Common. The inscription on this tomb-stone runs thus:—"Sacred to the memory of Thomson Bonar, of Camden Place, in this parish, Esquire, aged 70, and of Ann, daughter of Andrew Thomson, of Roehampton, Esquire, his wife, aged 59, murdered in their bedroom on the 31st of May 1813. Let not this mournful proof of the insufficiency of virtues even such as theirs—so great, so winning, and so mild—to shield them at the midnight hours against atrocities so monstrous! induce the belief that virtue is not the care of Providence below. Rather let it be remembered that surely none could have been better prepared for an event so awful, that from them were not alone averted the the many sufferings attendant on a dissolution in the common course of nature, but that, full of honor and years, loaded with the blessings and veneration of all who ever knew them, and each unconscious of the others fate, they only slept to wake in heaven! Nor be it omitted here to record their constant prayer, their fervent wish (so frequently expressed and so mysteriously fulfilled), that they might leave this world together. Horrible indeed for the survivors has been the mode of its accomplishment. Still may they be allowed to think that it was permitted in mercy to those whom they deplore, and, perhaps, as a signal reward for such virtues as have been rarely seen united!"

A BEAUTIFUL HORSE.—There is nothing that can contribute so much to render the horse beautiful and elegant, to improve his condition and make him all that is desirable, as "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy;" it has been used by many persons who own valuable carriage and other horses with decided success, and so well pleased are they with it that they always keep it on hand in case of emergency; it may be given at all times with perfect safety. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., proprietors for Canada. Sold by all medicine dealers.
