THE DEATH OF GERRIT SMITH.

The reaper, Death, whose sickle spares neither the tender flower nor the bearded grain, has of late been gathering a rich harvest. Some of our most eminent merchants, philanthropists and public servants have been called to their other life during the closing months of the year. It is only a few weeks since the venerable Jonathan Sturges breathed his last. Following close upon his frien., Mayor Havemeyer died in the harness. Within a fortnight we have been compelled to announce the death of Ezra Cornell, the founder of Cornell University. On Christmas Day we gave an obituary of the Rev. Dr. Walker, the eminent leader of Unitarian thought in New England. Yesterday, the death of an old public servant, Congressman Crocker, of Massachusetts, was announced, and to-day the list bears the name of Gerrit Smith. It is seldom the mortuary record is so full, and, though Death loves a shining mark, it is not often he obtains so many brilliant trophies within so short a period.

The demise of Gerrit Smith, especially as it follows so closely upon the death of so many other persons almost as well known, cannot fail to arrest the attention of all of us and cause us to think of an epoch the remembrance of which will pass away with the men who impressed their individuality upon it. It seems but yesterday since we were discussing Mr. Seward's "irrepressible conflict," and yet the men who were most active in precipitating that conflict have nearly all gone from among us. Garrisen and Whittier are still with us, it is true, but Arthur Tappan and most of the other "original abolitionists" have gone before. To-day we contemplate the open grave of Gerrit Smith, and with his silent clay we almost feel that we bury the dead past out of sight. His virtues and the record of a noble life alone remain to be celebrated in this hour of sorrow. His was not a selfish nor a self-willed nature. Though born to more landed acres than any of his compeers in the state, he felt from the beginning that so much was beyond his right to keep, and so he strenuously set himself to give it away, not as a child casts aside a toy of which it has wearied, but as a solemn work, to be wisely accomplished. Those who were oppressed more than others, and who at least were possessed in his eyes of the first right to receive, and as slavery to him was the great crime of the age, so the slave, of all men, was the most needful of succour. But the same mental and moral characteristics which made him an abolitionist in the days when abolitionism was hateful, made him also declare that the punishment of treason would be the mean crime of the age, if it was enforced in obedience to the popular demand. Such qualities could not fail to make their possessor a marked man among his fellows, and Gerrit Smith, more than any other of the anti slavery leaders, has left his impress on his age. He was not great, as Clay and Webster and Calhoun, were great—he was not even so compound a champion of his cause as Charles Sumner, but he united the aristocratic bearing of the gentleman with the simplicity of the servant of the bondman, giving to him as to a brother, in such equal proportions that he earned for himself a title better than that of gentleman, better than that of philanthropist—that of a man. Gerrit Smith never gave for the sake of giving—he never talked merely that he might be heard; neither was he so careful not to let the left hand know what the right hand did as to err in the opposite direction. His work was the simple performance of his duty as he understood it, and thus he performed it to the end, going and coming as was his wont in his own way and at his own time.

If we look back over Mr. Smith's history, we find in it few things to criticise unless we condemn his work itself. The American people no longer assail a man because he was an abolitionist, nor do they denounce him because he once held slaves. In the new era of our national life Gerrit Smith's memory is above criticism. Even those things which were most warmly condemned in him by his friends, turned into enemies, are the surest indices to his sturdy character. We can almost admire the act for its own sake when we find a man who had battled against slavery all his life, failing to vote against a pro-slavery measure because the vote was taken after nine o'clock, when nine was his bedtime. He could not defeat the measure, and he would not affect that his vote was useful when he knew to the contrary. The proof of his sincerity was as plain to others as it was to himself. When he gave it was to make some man better and happier. When he preached it was that he might convince. He was an advocate of peace, yet he favoured war when it became inevitable. He condemned the war as the crime of the South, but urged forgiveness of those who precipitated it. He helped the slave to-day and was equally willing to assist the master to-morrow. In spite of all this he was not a bundle of contradictions, but a man who lived with a purpose, and after consistently pursuing his mission, died only when his work was finished.—N. Y. Herald, Tuesday.

A young and interesting Popish lady named Licheuski, sought some smal compensation in the shape of £10,000 from Mr. McMaster, a member of an eminent mercantile firm in Belfast. The gentleman had given a promise, as the lady stated—the most important promise a man can give—and broke it. From some proceedings which took place in the Consolidated Chamber, we were all expecting that we should hear a narrative of more than ordinary interest. The case was fixed to be tried this morning, before Chief Justice Monaghan, but an intimation was given to his Lordship yesterday that the case had been settled. Whether Mr. McMaster paid down the £10,000, or the lady in compassion, accepted less, we cannot say. But it is positive cruelty to excite public curiosity to agony intense, and thus disappoint everybody by a cool announcement that the case "is settled."—Irish Times.

THE CENTENNIAL.—Lord Derby, the English Minister for Foreign Affairs, has addressed a letter to our Minister to the Court of St. James announcing that the English Government will with much pleasure take part in the international celebration to be held at Philadelphia. The letter expresses the desire of the British Government to do all that lies in its power to make the exhibition a success. This cordial acquiesence of England in our proposed Centennial is a most important event, and will contribute largely to its success. Germany aso comes into line, and we have an imperial commission appointed to represent Germany in Philadelphia under the presidency of Herr Jacobi. These evidences of European interest in the Centennial are gratifying, and should inspire our own people to renewed endeavours to make it a success worthy of the nation and the anniversary.—New York Herald.

Thomas' Excelsior Electric Oil—Worth Ten times its weight in Gold.

PAIN cannot stay where it is used. It is the cheapest medicine ever made. One bottle has cured bronchitis. Fifty cents worth has cured an old standing cough. It positively cures Catarrh, Asthma and Croup. Fifty cents worth has cured crick in the back, and the same quantity a lame back of eight years' standing. The following are extracts from a few of the many letters that have been received from the different parts of Canada, which, we think, should be sufficient to satisfy the most sceptical. J. Collard, of Sparta, Ontario, writes: "Send me six dozen Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil. Have sold al. I had from you and want more now. Its cures are truly wonderful." William Maguire, of Franklin, writes: "I have sold all the agent left; it acts like a charm—it was slow at first, but takes splendidly now." H. Cole, of Iona, writes: "Please forward six dozen of Thomas' Electric Oil, I am nearly run out; nothing equals it. It is highly recommended by those who have used it." J. Bedford, Thamesville, writes: "Send at once a further supply of Electric Oil, I have only one bottle left. I never saw anything sell so well, and give such general satisfaction." J. Thompson, Woodford, writes: "Send me some more Electric Oil. I have sold entirely out. Nothing takes like it." Miller & Reed, Ulverton, P. Q., write: "The Electric Oil is getting a great reputation here, and is daily called for. Send us a further supply without delay." Lemoyne, Gibb, & Co., Buckingham, P. Q., write: "Send us one gross Electric Oil. We find it takes well."

Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 50 cents.

WHOLESALE Ready-Made CLOTHING.

HAVING disposed of my Dry-Goods Establishment, I am now giving my personal attention to my Wholesale Ready-made Clothing Business. My stock is now ready for inspection, and will be found to compare favourably with any in the market.

Having had a long experience in the Ottawa Trade, I understand its requirements, and have my Clothing manufactured with a view to meet the wants of this market. It is my intention to keep on hand nothing but the best of Goods, both in point of quality and finish, believing as I do, that never in the history of the trade was there such a demand for a first-class article in Ready-made Clothing. I have employed

FOR SALE BY PUBLIC AUCTION

—ON—

MONDAY, THE FOURTH DAY OF JANUARY, 1875,

At the hour of THREE O'CLOCK, in the afternoon, at the Union House, in the City of Ottawa, all the interest and unexpired term of years, belonging to the late John Robertson O'Connor, in that valuable property, being part of the Government Reserve, near the head of the Chaudiere Slide in the said City of Ottawa, containing about three acres more or less, and bounded towards the north and west side thereof, by the waters of the River Ottawa, forming the channel leading to the said Chaudiere Slide, towards the east by Broad street, and towards the south by Oregon street. The Honourable the Commissioner of Public Works has consented to grant to the purchaser a new lease for the unexpired term of ten years given the late Mr. O'Connor, viz., until the 14th September 1891, together with the privilege of sawing timber on the property.

The ground rent is only $180 per annum. The attention of mill owners and those interested in the lumber trade of the Ottawa is called to the desirable investment now offered.

Terms and conditions of sale made known at time of auction.

For further information apply to Walker, Cassels and Pennock, Solicitors, Ottawa, or Hector McLean, Auctioneer.
