THOSE BIG NICKELS

In view of the unpopularity of the big five cent coin with so many people, the following Ottawa despatch is of interest:— "The request of the Retail Merchants 'Association of Canada for the withdrawal of one or other of the Canadian five cent coins from circulation will, it is said, result in a much more liberal interpretation being put on 'worn and defaced coinage' in order that the small five-cent pieces may all be withdrawn from circulation and melted down for other coin. The government is likely to retain the large nickel coin. This latter was authorized for issue in 1921, but the issue has not been rapid owing to the large number of the small five-cent pieces in circulation since the war and the consequent lack of demand for new coinage. Efforts will be made to call in the smaller coinage."
