In conducting the business of the farm the Standard Bank can play a prominent and useful part. Consult the manager and learn how true co-optration between banking and agriculture bui... a more prosperous comunity.

Local Shipper Had Cattle in Freight Near Aurora

Fourteen head of cattle were killed and several more were seriously injured when a southbound C.N.R. freight train rounded a sharp curve and crashed into the rear of another freight standing for repairs near Gormley station, south of Aurora, on Saturday afternoon. One man, who was sleeping in the caboose of the standing train, was dead when his body was recovered from the wreck. The cattle which were killed and injured belonged to Messrs. Fred Stuart of Flesherton and Geo. Stuart of Powassan. The animals were covered by insurance, but no doubt the loss to the shippers will be considerable on the injured stock. The shipment consisted of three cars, two of which were wrecked.

WHEN IS A GIRL AN OLD MAID?

Being an old maid is a state of mind and not a chronological fact. There are women who are old maids who are still in their teens and others who are still girls in their eighties. There are women who are old maids in spite of having three husbands and half a dozen children, and others who have never married who are not old maids. In grandmother's time, when 16 was thought a ripe age for matrimony, a woman was considered an old maid if she had not captured a man when she reached 21. As time passes the period of old maidhood was pushed back to around the thirties.

Airplane Flew Over Town Came to Grief at Priceville

An airplane arrived from the south on Friday afternoon of last week and when over the town turned east, and, it is understood, circled and landed in Markdale to secure gasoline and find his bearings. On its return it then flew to the west, circled Priceville and landed in an open field there when darkness approached. The pilot of the machine was Mr. H. S. Sellars of Hamilton and the machine was reported to be owned by J. C. Elliott of that place. Quite a number of people had a close up view of the plane, which was a two-seater. Saturday morning an attempt was made to fly back to Hamilton and it is understood the pilot had difficulty in starting the engine and had the assistance of a local man to turn on the gas, while he turned the propeller, a dangerous operation for one not accustomed to it. Too much gas was turned on and before the pilot could get into the machine it is stated that it was going too fast for him to catch on and turn the throttle off, the plane crashing into a row of trees fringing the field. We understand that the plane is a total wreck.
