More Scott Act.

In a case lately tried, a witness gave evidence that he had bought a bottle of whiskey and paid for it. On this evidence the justices convicted the defendant. We now understand that an information has been laid before our Mayor against the witness who gave evidence on the Scott Act trial, accusing him of having aided and procured the defendant, in the Scott Act case, of having committed an offence under the Scott Act. If this is law, and there must be something in it, since Mr. Klein and Mr. O'Connor, who, we believe, have thoroughly looked into the matter, have advised the laying of this information, there will be few convictions under the Scott Act after this. If a party who buys spirituous liquors from another, in doing so aids and procures that other party to commit an offence under the Scott Act, the party buying it is, as it is contended by these two lawyers, liable to a penalty of $50, and in default of payment, liable to be imprisoned. That being the case, the witness, a party who bought the liquor, could on the trial refuse to answer on the ground that if he would answer he would be criminally liable. A party not favorable to the Act would, no doubt, claim this privilege, but a good Scott Act man perhaps would not, and give his evidence. Now, supposing the witness said "I went into defendant's house, bought liquor from him which was intoxicating, and paid him for it." The witness, certainly, must in that case be considered as having aided or procured the defendant to commit an offence under the Scott Act, for the defendant could not commit the offence unless some one bought from him, and by the witness asking and paying for the liquor he aided or procured the defendant to commit the offence. The question is a new one, and will perhaps deter parties from buying spirituous liquors when it becomes known that they are liable to the same penalty as the party selling. Neither party however could be compelled to give evidence to commit himself. What would the next step? More law. Good thing, this Scott Act, for the lawyers.

Newfoundlandese Dialect.

From Youth's Companion.

The prevailing type of nationality on Newfoundland is English or Irish, modified by insular surroundings. Three-quarters of the 180,000 population of the whole island is said to be made up of poor fishermen. They make a hardy, rough race of men, familiar to all the different phases of ocean life. Some of their oddities of speech, particularly at the more remote fishing stations, are worth taking note of. A recent writer presents a few of them:

Like the Southern negro, who so often uses "him" for "it," so these islanders twist the word "he" into absurd combinations. "Will the trout be cooked soon?" one asked the waiter-girl at a coast inn.

"Maybe he wil be," was the reply.

"The wagon has lost he's wheel," or "I don't know where the spade he is," illustrate further these peculiarities.

The name of the island is almost universally pronounced New-fen-land, with a strong accent on the final syllable. The marine habitude of the people crops out in the term "skipper," always employed by a subordinate in addressing a superior, or by a street boy accosting a gentleman.

Northward is in Newfoundland "down" in direction; the phrase "down North" corresponding pretty closely to the "down East" of our Middle and Western States. For the Newfoundlander's phrase "up South" we have no equivalent, excepting the "up the South End," of Boston. There is also a strange broadening of vowels in colloquial speech. Thus rifle become "rudge," and fire, "fur." Many of the people would say, "The forest has been furred,"—i. e., burned over.

Extraordinary Procession in Ireland.

St. James Gazette.

At 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon an immense procession entered the town of New Ross from Fethard, county Wexford. First came a brass band, then the wagonettes containing about sixty persons, being the wives and children of thirteen farmers who were evicted last week from their holdings on the Marquis of Ely's estates. The wagonettes were followed by 300 horsemen, four deep, and a number of priests on cars, and by a string of cars in a single file, said to be several miles long. This remarkable gathering was accompanied by five or six bands. The object of the demonstration was to escort the evicted families to New Ross workhouse, where a "ward of honor" has been set apart for their use. Notices had been previously posted about town calling upon the people to assemble in their thousands "to witness the last resource of landlord oppression, and to comfort the poor evicted to the workhouse." In compliance with this suggestion all the shops were shut and the town was decorated. A platform was erected, from which Nationalist orators harangued the people.

The Difference Between Home and Foreign Mission.

Louisville Courier.

The young creature had just joined the church and was reading a missionary paper after meeting.

"John," said she, looking up anxiously, "I have just given a quarter for home mission purposes. I hardly know the difference between home and foreign mission. Which one had I better patronize?"

"That depends on your inclinations, my dear."

"What do they do?"

"Do! Why, they say that the home missionaries live upon the people."

"Yes, and the foreign ones?"

"Here the process is reversed and the people live upon the missionaries if they are fat enough."

An Exhilarating Scott Act Drink.

Peterboro Times.

Talk about new drinks, but the Scott act lays everything flat in that line. Since the first day of May last over 50 new drinks have appeared at the hotels, and every day adds to the number. At the police court yesterday, a witness in the Daly case referred to the very latest out. He called it "Gobbler Johnston's Bitters," and in answer to the magistrate said it was composed of "a glass of plain soda with a clove in it." It is said to be a great favorite with the members of the Lime Junice club.

A WOMAN'S SUFFERING S AND GRATITUDE.

A VOICE FROM AUSTRIA. (1)

Near the village of Zillingdorf, in Lower Austria, lives Maria Haas, an intelligent and industrious woman, whose story of physical suffering and final relief, as related by herself, is of interest to English women. "I was employed," she says, "in the work of a large farmhouse. Overwork brought on sick headache, followed by a deathly fainting and sickness of the stomach, until I was unable to retain either food or drink. I was compelled to take to my bed for several weeks. Getting a little better from rest and quiet, I sought to do some work, but was soon taken with a pain in my side, which in a little while spread over my whole body, and throbbed in my every limb. This was followed by a cough and shortness of breath, until I finally could not sew, and I took to my bed for the second, and as I thought, for the last time. My friends told me that my time had nearly come, and that I could not live longer than when the trees put on their green once more. Then I happened to get one of the Seigel's pamphlets. I read it and my dear mother bought me a bottle of Seigel's Syrup, which it took exactly according to directions, and I had not taken the whole of it before I felt a great change for the better. My last illness began June 3rd, 1882, and continued to August 9th, when I began to take the Syrup. Very soon I could do a little light work. The cough left me, and I was no more troubled in breathing. Now I am perfectly cured. And oh, how happy I am! I cannot express my gratitude enough for Seigel's Syrup. Now I must tell you that the doctors in our district distributed handbills cautioning the people against the medicine, telling them it would do them no good, and many thereby were influenced to destroy the Seigel pamphlets; but now wherever one is to be found, it is kept like a relic. The few preserved are borrowed to read and I have lent mine for six miles around our district. People have come eighteen miles to get me to buy the medcine for them, knowing that it cured me, and to be sure to get the right kind. I know a woman who was looking like death, and who told them there was no help for her, that she had consulted several doctors but none could help her. I told her of Seigel's Syrup, and wrote the name down for her that she might make no mistake. She took my advice and the Syrup, and now she is in perfect health, and the people around us are amazed. The medicine has made so much progress in our neighborhood that the people say they don't want the doctor any more, but they take the Syrup. Sufferers from gout who were confined to their beds and could hardly move a finger, have been cured by it. There is a girl in our district who caught cold by going through some water, and was in bed five years with costiveness and rheumatic pains, and had to have an attendant to watch by her. There was not a doctor in the surrounding districts to whom her mother had not applied to relieve her child, but every one crossed themselves and said they could not help her. Whenever the little bell rang which is rung in our place when somebody is dead, we thought surely it was for her, but Seigel's Syrup and Pills saved her life, and now she is as healthy as anybody, goes to church and can work even in the fields. Everybody was astonished when they saw her out, knowing how many years she had been in bed. To-day she adds gratitude to mine for God's mercies and Seigel's Syrup.

MARIA HAAS.

The people of England speak confirming the above.

AFTER MANY YEARS.

"Whittle-le-Woods, near Chorley, Dec. 26th, 1883.

Dear Sir,—Mother Seigel's medicine sells exceedingly well with us. All that try it speak highly in its favor. We had a case of a young lady that had been troubled many years with pains after eating. She tells us that the pains were entirely taken away after a few doses of your medicine.—
Yours truly, E. PEEL.

AETER SEVERAL YEARS.

Stoke Ferry, Jan. 9, 1884.

Gentlemen,—I have used Seigel's Syrup for several years, and found it a most efficacious remedy for liver complaints and general debility, and I always keep some by me, and cannot speak too highly in in its praise.—I remain, yours, thankfully, Harriett King.

AFTER 16 YEARS.

95, Newgate st., Worksop, Notts, Dec. 26th, 1883.

Gentlemen,—It is with the greatest pleasure I accord my testimony as to the efficacy of Mother Seigel's Syrup. My wife, who has suffered from acute dyspepsia for over 16 years, is now perfectly better through the sole help of your syrup. I have spent pounds in medicines from doctors—in fact, I began to think she was incurable, until your marvelous medicine was tried.—I remain, yours, thankfully. A. Ford.

THE EFFECTS HAVE BEEN WONDERFUL.

Ilford Road Dispenary, Dunkinfield, May 3rd 1884.

Dear Sir,—I am happy to inform you that the sale of your Syrup and Pills increases here continually. Several of my customers speak of having derived more benefit from the use of these than from any other medicine. In some instances the effect has been wonderful.—Yours very respectfully,
Pro. Edwin Eastwood, J. B.

Notes from Centre Wellington.

I was lately passing through a portion of this county and I took some notes of what I saw and heard. We are in the middle of the spring wheat harvest to-day, the 6th of September. The straw is somewhat short but not much affected with rust; the grain itself is middling. My wife, a few minutes ago, rubbed a few heads gathered where my son is reaping, and the sample is plumper than it was last year. Potatoes are not abundant, but the Early Rose has no bitter taste this year; there is not enough of them planted; farmers feared the taste would be permanent. Turnips are good, but few are sown. The fly last year took them almost totally, and we feared a recurrence of the visit. Peass and barley are middling. Hay in quantity is considerable and it has been well saved. The Scott Act is the main theme of discourse here. I noticed as I passed through Fergus and Elora an unusual dullness in and about the taverns. Strangers are sharply eyed and sometimes suspected as spies, unless their business is known. This liquor question has made a new division among the people. Men who have the same faith in religion, the same belief in politics, take different sides on the liquor debate. As a rule, with some exceptions, what we call the rougher element is on the side of the bottle, and the rest is composed of indifferent men, and men who would make no compromise with the habit. The Act is not so popular to-day as it was on the day of its adoption. The convictions have stirred up a foul sediment that has in a considerable degree alienated the sympathy of thoughtful minds from tavern-keepers. The public sentiment is that liquor-liking men should respect law while it is law; if it is bad, repeal as soon as possible. Temperance men argue that since a class of men will not respect one law, there is no proof that they woud respect any law, and that such a class is not itself respectable. The liquor men argue that the Act trenches on liberty; the temperance men argue that drunken men abuse liberty and they should be deprived of it.

Our experience in this city has convinced us of the necessity of an apprentice system, whereby all boys, desirious of learning a trade, should be bound for a number of years, and the employer equally bound to give every information and practice to the apprentice to acquire a thorough knowledge of his trade. There are now a number in this city, calling themselves journeymen, who have no more practical knowledge of their trade than an apprentice should acquire in one year. These men lower the dignity of labor, dishonor their calling, and reflect no credit on their first employers. A practical knowledge in any trade can only be secured by years of close application to details; and boys put with a firm to learn a trade should be placed in charge of experienced journeymen. The system prevalent in most works is to allow the apprentice to pick up the details of their trade for themselves, and when errors are made the only instruction generally given them are abusive and profane language. As we are a young country, and our future greatness, to a certain extent, depends upon our people, let us lay our foundation of mechanical industries upon a solid basis, and agitate the passage of an apprentice bill by our legislature, whereby we may have some assurance that our youths will be given a thorough and practical knowledge of the trades they may choose to follow.
