"Killed" by Shock is Working With Hydro

Almost miraculous is the recovery of an employee of the Ontario Hydro Electric Commission after 22,000 volts had coursed through his body and left him as dead. Norman Douglas Ellis remained unconscious for nearly a week, and for eleven months was under hospital and surgical care. Now the switchman at the Strachan Avenue Hydro-Electric Station, he was employed as station operator at Eugenia Falls station when the accident occurred.

Head Touched Cable.

The moment his head came in contact with the cable which carried the current direct from the generators there was a flash of flame, and Ellis remained suspended in midair, burned and unconscious. The shock deprived 28 towns on the Eugenia Falls system of power.

Fellow-employees pried the apparently dead man loose, and immediately artificial respiration was commenced. A doctor was called and pronounced him dead. But, his rescuers, true to their training did not stop their resusciation efforts until the stiffening of the body would give final proof of death. After three-quarters of an hour Ellis resumed breathing.

The current burned nearly all the flesh from his scalp and fractured the skull. For a time he was paralyzed, and then gangerene set in. Finally the doctors removed practically the entire skull without the patient being under an anaesthetic, and fitted a bakelite cap under a heavy wig, which protects the brain cells where the skull bone was removed.

Dr. E. E. Gaby of the Toronto Peneral Hospital, who is a specialist on electric shock and burns for the Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, and Dr. K. G. McKenzie, a specialist in brain surgery, occupied a major role in Mr. Ellis's recovery to health.

Striking Comparison

The death of a merry-go-round operator in Toronto recently after receiving a 220-volt current makes a striking comparrison to the survival of 22,000 volts. It is also interesting to note that Ellis received the equivalent of between 4,000 and 5,000 horsepower through his body, while capital punishment in the United States is carried out with from 10 to 11 horsepower. In that latter case however the current is repeated more than once.

Hydro officials claim that men have been revived with resusciation methods following eight hours of apparent death due to electric shocks.—Toronto Globe.

GLASS THAT CAN'T BE BROKEN

And now a shatterless glass has been produced for windshields of cars. It is accomplished by cementing two pieces of glass together with a sheet of celluloid in the centre. Done under high temperature the celluloid is absorbed by the glass and the transparency is just as perfect as in any good sheet of glass. Impact will crack this glass but the weight of the blow must be very heavy to make a hole in it.

A hammer may be used to strike a heavy blow which will shoot cracks in all directions, but there is no falling apart of glass and what the ordinary observer cannot understand is that the cracks in the glass do not appear to be on the surface to the touch. One may rub a finger over them and even run the end of a finger nail across them without striking any obstacle such as is felt in the ordinary shattered piece of glass.

Many do not yet realize this!

"My bill for that call was 60 cents", said Mrs. King, "and Mrs. Jones paid 75 cents!"

The explanation is that Mrs. King had said to the operator "I will speak to anyone there".

That made it a Station-to-Station call.

Station-to-Station calls are quicker and about 20 per cent cheaper than person-to-person messages. Moreover, low evening rates (after 8.30 p.m.) and still lower night rates (after midnight) apply on station-to-station calls. And connection is usually established while you remain at the telephone.

Remember please — station-to-station calls are quicker and cheaper.
