HENRAISES BROOD IN AN APPLE TREE

Henry Janke of the 12th Con., Sullivan is the owner of a Plymouth Rock which thought not so discriminating in thec lass for whom she provides the hen fruit as the black one recorded in nursery rhymes, is very particular where she lays her eggs. The wind had broken the limb of an apple tree in Henry's orchard and the Rock in her search of a nest, spied the receptacle formed by the lodged limb flew up into the tree and got busy as a wealth producer. In all, chookie laid ten eggs in the aerial nest and last Sunday ten chickens were hatched. The family was so large that one chick fell out of the nest on Monday but didn't break any of its bones in the fall. The other hen cast longing glances at the nine in the tree but as chicks had not the use of their wings one peep over the edge was enough to make them huddle together lest they tumble out too. Seeing the mother's distress Henry came to the rescue and handed down the other nine. This is the first time we ever heard of chickens bing hatched in an apple tree.—Chesley Enterprise.

Two young boys near Arthur put a big iron nut on the rail, but it was discovered just before the Teeswater train came along and a possible wreck was averted . The boys were given a severe lecture in court and were allowed to go.

Showing at The Fairs

Fairs have paved the way to profit for mny farmers. They offer an opportunity that should not be overlooked by the man who has a superior product, for with good management there is money in quality. Take the producer of purebred live stock. If he puts up a good show herd and selects his fairs with good judgment he can make expenses, and maybe more, in premium money. His profits come in free publicity. He comes into contact with more prospective customers than would ever come to his farm to see his stock. He makes sales and lays the foundation for future sales. He feels the plus of the trade, which helps him to make his plans for the future.

Some who show fail to cash in their winnings as they might. They take what comes to them in the way of publicity and do nothing to cultivate it. The enterprising showman will carry a stock of photographs or cuts for newspaper use, get acquainted with reporters and help them in any way he can, and make use of advertising to announce his showing and proclaim his winnings. It all tak es careful planning and constant alertness. To go to the fair and win, and then tell the world about it. Fitting and showing a herd is only half he story. The big profis comes in effective publicity — Chicago Drovers Journal.

In addition to these there are also two splendid stories of camera hunting by the well known writer Bonnycastle Dale and Dr. S. S. Dickey. Robert James contributes another splendid "Tale from the Wardroom Mess" while the magazine contains stories and feature articles.

FELL ON PITCHFORK HANDLE

John McMillan, aged 23, married was taken to the Marine Hospital Owen Sound, with a terrible wound, sustained when he fell on a pitchfork handle. McMillan was working on the top of the load on the farm of Peter Seaman, near Sauble. He missed his footing and fell from the load, which was quite high. The fork was standing upright, stuck in the ground. McMillan landed on top of it. The handle penetrated a distance of a foot or more. The fork was withdrawn by Mr. Seaman, who was close at hand. An operation was performed. Although he was in a serious condition, hope was held for his recovery.

Co-operation is working to-gether, so let's go to make our annual Fall Fair a real success, by working and boosting.

It's a dull day in neighborhood hospitals when one or more patient for operation on tonsils or appendix are not laid on the table.
