COMMON PURPOSE

Anthropologists tell us that man in his early state lived apart with his own little family, and archaeologists say the first communities were formed by confederated families brought together for a common purpose—protection against man's natural enemies. To-day, man is distinctly a gregarious animal attracted more and more to community life. And men still build cities for a common purpose, or common purposes.

In the city one finds protection against fire, disease and the enemies of society. One goes to the city for good schools and monumental churches, paved streets, employment, art, entertainment, the society of other men and comforts of life denied the rural citizen There is found the front rank of civilization.

The people of Flesherton have a common purpose. It is tho advancement of the community as a whole. That common purpose is hardly distinguishable from the purpose of each individual. That which benefits the community reacts to the benefit of each of its citizens.

Prosperity and progress come to those communities whose citizens have their eyes upon the largest number of common purposes. Success crowns the efforts of the man of purpose, and the city with a common purpose works as one man.

"Common purpose" creates new industries, increases business, minimizes unemployment, makes cities better places in which to live and perform miracles in community betterment.

EDITORIAL NOTES

When a man pleads, "Now, listen to reason," what he means is that w are to listen to him.

President-elect Hoover of the United States is determined to be original. Within a few days of his selection he has started off on a warship to pay good-will visits to South American Republics. They tell us one of his reasons for this unique pilgrimage is to get away from office-seekers until inauguration day is near.

Four of the bandits who robbed the mails at Toronto last summer have been sentenced to serve long terms in the penitentiary. Judge Wright told them they could have been sentenced to penal servitude for life and been whipped into the bargain. This disposes of all but the fifth bandit, who will no doubt be caught one of these fine days. The rascals diplayed daring and ingenuity in their crime, but the arm of the law is always long, and in Canada detection and punishment almost certain. Strange that wrongdoers should strive so hard to get other people's mney, when by equal industry they might gain an honest and abundant living.

Ten Year Old Boy To Receive Medal

Stanley Conron, aged 10 years, will be presented with a bronze medal by the Royal Canadian Humane Society next Thursday, and all the boys and girls of school age in Sudbury will be on hand to witness the presentation, which will be made by Mayor Bibby.

A few months ago, Stanley saved a baby from death beneath the wheels of a fast express train, snatching the child from the engine's path in the nick of time. A second later, he too, would have lost his life. Stanley's father is Sergeant George Conron of the Sudbury police force, and the boy is a native of Barrie. He is the first lad of his age to be so recognized by the Humane Society.—Toronto Star.
