CURED

by taking the only recognized cure for all forms of kidney disease,

WARNER'S SAFE CURE

Dr. C. F. P. Burcumore, No. 878 Huntington Avenue, Boston, Mass., says: "In my work on gynecology I find there is nothing as beneficial as Warner's Safe Cure. It purifies the kidneys and drives out the poison from the system. It gives support to women and cures the various diseases with which they are afflicted. I am a loyal indorser of Safe Cure, because I know it is a great medicine."

IF IN DOUBT MAKE THIS SIMPLE TEST:

Put some morning urine in a glass or bottle, let it stand 24 hours; if then it is cloudy, or has a brick dust sediment, or particles float in it, your kidneys are diseased, and if not attended to at once, your life will be cut off with Bright's disease, diabetes, uric acid poison or other complications.

ANALYSIS FREE

If, after you have made this test, you have any doubt in your mind as to the development of the disease in your system, send a sample of your urine to the Medical Department, Warner's Safe Cure Co., Rochester, N. Y., and 44 Lombard St., Toronto Can., and our doctors will analyze it and send you a report with advice free of charge to you, together with a valuable book describing all diseases of the kidneys, liver, bladder and blood, and treatment for each disease.

All letters from women, read and answered by a woman doctor. All correspondence in strictest confidence.

Dr. Leo Vogel, of Rogers Park, Ill., says: "I have prescribed Warner's Safe Cure for diseases of the kidneys, liver and bladder, and am well pleased with the results. I find it drives out the disease germs; it induces sleep and sharpens the appetite. In my estimation it is the only absolute cure for diseases of the kidneys and bladder, such as Bright's disease, diabetes, rheumatism, gall-stones and uric acid poison."

How many a poor fellow suffers untold agony with pains in the back, gout and swelling in his limbs, and does not get at the seat of the trouble, the kidneys! Heal the kidneys so they will perform their work properly and you will have no gout, rheumatism, diabetes, Bright's disease, gall-stones, inflammation of the bladder, eczema, scrofula, or liver complaint, all of which are caused by diseased kidneys. Do not neglect your kidneys if you have any of these complications, but take Warner's Safe Cure, it will cure you.

Warner's Safe Cure is purely vegetable and contains no narcotic or harmful drugs. It is free from sediment and is pleasant to take; it does not constipate. It kills the disease germs. Warner's Safe Cure has been prescribed and used by leading doctors for over 25 years, and is used in many prominent hospitals exclusively.

Warner's Safe Cure is what you need. You can buy it at any drug store or direct, $1 a bottle.

Refuse Substitutes and Imitations

There is none "just as good" as Warner's. Insist on the genuine, which always cures. Substitutes contain harmful drugs which injure the system.

Beware of so-called kidney cures which are full of sediment and of bad odor—they are positively harmful and do not cure.

WARNER'S SAFE PILLS move the bowels gently and aid a speedy cure.

CUBA, THE GARDEN SPOT OF THE WORLD.

Sir William Van Horn, in an interview published in the New York Herald, December 16th, 1900, said: "Each time I go to Cuba I am surprised at the improvement since American occupation. Yellow fever has become almost a thing of the past and will soon be stamped out entirely. Cuba will become the American Riviera. There is a future for industrious Americans who go to Cuba. I suggest the culture of oranges, lemons, coffee, cocoanuts, pineapples and bananas. Land properly cultivated will produce a net profit to the owner of from $50 to $1,000 per acre per year. No frosts—no droughts—no failure of crops. A soft, even temperature, the year around; ample moisture; an absolute certainty of abundant harvest. Hartington Happenings.

Hartington, Jan. 30.—A very severe electric storm passed over here last night, doing considerable damage to property. The lightning struck a barn, the property of Thomas Leonard, burning it to the ground along with three hundred bushels of grain and a quantity of hay. Mr. Leonard had a small insurance, but it will not cover loss. The soft weather has spoilt the roads to such an extent that drawing timber and stove wood will be out of question for a while. A. O. Abrams has purchased an up-to-date cream separator. J. C. Wood has gone back to his farm at Mountain Grove; he intends taking out some timber. The annual missionary meeting was held Monday evening. Speeches were delivered by Revs. Tredren, of Elginburg, and Perley, of Harrowsmith. Subscriptions were asked for and the result was most satisfactory. Frederick Dennison is busy hauling wood from Verona. A very pleasant time is reported by those who attended the surprise party at Mrs. E. Whitty's. Harry Campsall and E. Freeman, visiting at Sydenham, have returned. Mrs. Clow and daughter, Mildred, returned to-day after spending a week with friends in the city and Pittsburg. Mrs. E. Revell is visiting her father in the city, who is very ill. E. Revell is on the sick list. Mrs. Ezra Thompson, visiting in vicinity, returned to Fish Creek. A number attended the horse races at Sydenham on Thursday. Rev. Blanchard has returned from Smith's Falls, where he has been visiting his parents.

TO YOUNG MEN

DR. MILLIGAN ON PRINCIPAL GRANT'S LIFE.

The University Plan For the Preparation of Men For Leadership in the Nation's Work.

In McMaster University Monthly Rev. Dr. Milligan has the following fine appreciation of the life and work of Principal Grant of Queen's:

It is difficult, in the most adequate way, to estimate the worth of such a rich nature as Principal Grant's, he having but lately passed away from us. It takes time to appreciate such work and influence as his. Yet even to the eye his work shows itself as one of rare magnitude. He came to Kingston in 1877. Were one to rise from the grave in 1977 and behold what now strikes the eye he could well say, "What a century has wrought."

There are many aspects in which our friend may be profitably contemplated. He was a many-sided man, faithful and influential in many directions. This means he was richly and completely endowed. But other men have been so whose lives were comparative failures. Principal Grant was a man of constant and intense activity. He did what was laid to his hands to do with all his might. He never for a day ate the bread of idleness. He was a model and inspiration to his students and friends in this respect. His was the strenuous life.

Whilst he did his work with intensity he also incorporated into it carefully-elaborated thought and counsel. He took no important step in life without mature consideration and careful consultation with capable and well-tried friends. He was a leader, not a despot. True, at times his strong nature showed itself in impulsive utterances, which no one confessed, when he was at his best, more readily than he.

Independence Of Thought.

He claimed for himself and encouraged in others independence of thought. He held that every man must be his own priest in intellectual as in spiritual interests. In fact, the world to him was a place for the making of men in an enduring and Divine fashion.

This explains his wide and vital outlook upon human life in all its phases, whether found in church or state. Nothing human was indifferent to him. The university was a man-making institution in his eyes, and that, too, in the highest and most inspiring degree. Pharisaism of every sort he eschewed, both intellectual as well as religious. He was jealous lest educational instrumentalities should be transformed into finalities and thus breed pedantry, another name for academic pharisaism.

He used to say, man is a born sluggard and idolater, and that to keep under these insidious foes requires constant vigilance. And is he not right? Are we not prone to externalize our intellectual and spiritual responsibility and live in formulas, and then thank God we are not as other men are? To Principal Grant, a university as a place of mere academic employment and privilege would have been a whited sepulchre, full of dead men's bones. He strove to make Queen's a place of life. He encouraged all her teachers, by precept and example, to be men of life and inspiration to their pupils, otherwise libraries could serve as mere channels of information better than they.

Refreshing The Intellect.

It was this conviction that led him to give ready aid to the organization of the Alumni conference, a work which found its beginning at Queen's and has happily been taken up by other colleges, a work which aids greatly in keeping men's minds in fresh and constant relations to the great streams of intellectual movement, social, political and theological. He saw that professional life even was in danger of becoming conventional and slavish unless kept free by unbroken connection with its appropriate ideals, and that, too, for men old as well as young. With him the ideal was the practical, life a vocation and never a mere avocation. The end of life was best fulfilled by the highest intelligence, all other things being equal. Men, he thoroughly believed, loved God best with heart and soul the more they loved him with their minds. He believed reason was a divine gift, to find its highest use in religious thought and service. An unreasoning piety was to him often the inflection of an idle and superficial life. The sober, patient, vigilant and reverent exercises of reason he welcomed as the friend of religion. Agnosticism in every form was to him nothing but veiled superficiality and indifference. It is true it may speak sometimes with pious accent, but it was still Jacob with only the hands of Esau.

He had no fear about truth being able to take care of itself. What he dreaded was the perversion or suppression of truth. He was a man of splendid courage, and I believe its secret is to be found in his steadfast faith in the power of truth to vanquish error. One can never forget when Dr. Briggs of New York was in trouble and when all around in the states freedom of discussion regarding Biblical criticism was prevented by very practical persecution. Principal Grant was the outstanding figure in preventing bigotry and tyranny from doing its desolating work within our fair dominion.

The University's Work.

He regarded universities as the centres whence men should receive light in such purity and intensity as to equip them to be the leaders of their fellow-men. Rich gifts must be carefully trained to qualify their possessors for high and safe leadership of their fellow-men. The oil of rich endowments must be purged of all crude elements, else there are sure to be fatal explosions. Men must supply knowledge abundantly in their energy, else it may issue in personal and social shipwreck. In view of this principle he always dreaded anything like stampeding the church or state into any action that might end in worse ways than those whose prevention was sought by unwise measures. The passage of Holy Writ which Principal Grant's career constantly calls to mind is. "He that believeth will not make haste."

He had an intense sense of man's obligation to act as God's steward. The gifts given us are not out own. We must render an account to God for all our gifts and opportunities. Every man has a work to do for the enrichment of the world, and this work involves toil and sacrifice. Speaking to him on his bed of sickness during his last visit to Toronto, I expressed deep regret at his illness.

Knew What It Meant.

He replied that the work to be done at Queen's when he came to it meant the sacrifice of a life, that work with its cross was given him to do, and that, so far from regretting what it demanded, he would do it again. Such was his estimate of the importance of Queen's to the country. I have spoken of Principal Grant mainly in those aspects of his character which I regard as specially calculated to benefit the young men who are seeking by a university course to prepare themselves for their life-work. I refrain in this connection from regarding him as a citizen, a patriot and a churchman. Let it suffice to say that his Catholic and pentrating personality yielded abundant and rich fruit for the benefit of both church and state.

It has been said that the history of the world is at bottom the history of its great men. The reason of this is that these men represent in fulness what is dimly seeking expression in the mass of men and lead out into successful assertion in men what otherwise might have passed fruitlessly through life. In this sense it may be said that during his principalship Dr. Grant's history was largely that of Queen's.

New men will take the helm of the university at Kingston, and men diverse in temperament and gifts from those of Principal Grant are perhaps needed to do other work than has been done, but never can the men of Queen's forget a career of plodding devotion and brilliant achievement and a great life sacrificed in the interests of their alma mater.

AN OBLIGING RAILWAY.

Brockville & Westport's Passengers Raid An Orchard.

Toronto News.

The bald statement that the Brockville and Westport railway had been sold appeared in the daily papers the other day. This was a notable line. As might be supposed, it runs from the town on the St. Lawrence northwesterly to the village of Westport, a hamlet set amongst lakes in which bask stupendous maskinonge and the gamiest of black bass. The line is about forty miles long, and it has no telegraphs, no signals, no switchmen, no track walkers. The telegraph is not needed, for there is but one locomotive and one train of cars. Consequently, the danger of a collision is minimized. The line corkscrews through the country in a most curious fashion. The surveyors very carefully followed the plan of pursuing the line of least resistance, and if the meanest hillock was in the way, they went around it. On the daily train that pulled out of Brockville for part of the year, there were two officials: the engineer and the conductor-baggageman-brakeman. This pooh bah was a personage of most genial and accommodating manners. Once, when a party of Americans admired an orchard near the track, the conductor stopped the train as it slowly bumped its way through the beautiful country, and, all hands descending, everybody ate apples for half an hour. There was no fear of not arriving on schedule time, for schedule time was any time. About half way between Brockville and Westport, there was alleged to be a station named Lyndhurst, and it is recorded that once upon a time there was a passenger who desired to alight at that point. The conductor was mystified. He knew that the time table mentioned Lyndhurst, but never within the memory of man had the train stopped there, for the reason that though the station appeared in the folder it was not visible in the landscape. Neither shed, platform or even siding was there, and the crestfallen conductor was fain to acknowledge that he did not know where the station was. History does not relate what the passenger did in the premises. He might possibly have sued the company for promising to carry him to a non-existent village. But perhaps the valid defence might have been put in that any passenger who was fool enough to buy a ticket for a place without ascertaining whether it was real or imaginary had no cause for complaint. However, the outcome is lost in the mists of history. The glory of the sequestered line is soon to depart, for it is proposed to make it a "system," and to extend it straight through mid-Ontario to Sault Ste. Marie.

Taken early, cuts it short promptly.

Taken during its prevalence, it preoccupies the system and prevents its invasion.

Taken while suffering, relief is speedily realized, which is continued to an entire cure.
