

Clute woman attends seminar

Forms, Facts and Figures, a training module to develop administrative skills for farm women's organizations, was held recently in Guelph.

This workshop, conducted by Federated Women's Institute of Ontario, is the second phase of their training programme.

Among the participants at this workshop was Anne Dyas from the Clute Women's Institute, Cochrane.

Last year's participants were trained in the skills necessary in putting on a workshop. This year, a new group of participants from all parts of Ontario have been trained with the skills and information to be secretaries, treasurers, and presidents, as well on presentation skills.

The participants are expected to return to their areas and put on a series of workshops to help train their local members and interested members of the public.

Federated Women's Institutes of Ontario (FWIO), the largest and oldest farm and rural women's organization, with over 1,000 branches throughout Ontario, is concerned that it provides its members with the opportunity to learn the skills necessary to run not only a women's institute branch, but also any organization.
