Synopsis of Canadian Northwest HOMESTEAD REGULATIONS.

Any even numbered section of Dominion Lands in Manitoba or the North-West Provinces, excepting 8 and 26, not reserved, may be homesteaded by any person the sole head of a family, or male over 18 years of age, to the extent of one-quarter section, of 160 acres, more or less.

Application for homestead entry must be made in person by the applicant at the office of the local Agent or Sub-Agent. Entry by proxy may, however, be made on certain conditions by the father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister of an intending homesteader.

An application for entry or inspection made personally at any Sub-Agent's office may be served to the local Agent by the Sub-Agent, at the expense of the applicant, and if the land applied for is vacant on receipt of the telegram such application is to have priority and the land will be held until the necessary papers to complete the transaction are received by mail.

In case of "personation" the entry will be summarily cancelled and the applicant will forfeit all priority of claim.

An application for inspection must be made in person. The applicant must be eligible for homestead entry, and only one application for inspection will be received from an individual until that application has been disposed of.

A homesteader whose entry is in good standing and not liable to cancellation, may, subject to approval of Department, relinquish it in favor of father, mother, son, daughter, brother or sister, if eligible, but to no one else, on filing declaration of abandonment.

Where an entry is summarily cancelled or voluntarily abandoned, subsequent to institution of cancellation proceedings, the applicant for inspection will be entitled to prior right of entry.

Applicants for inspection must state in what particulars the homesteader is in default, and if subsequently the statement is found to be incorrect in material particulars, the applicant will lose any prior right of re-entry should the land become vacant, or if entry has been granted it may be summarily cancelled.

Duties—A settler is required to perform the conditions under one of the following plans:—

(1) At least six months' residence upon and cultivation of the land in each year during the term of three years.

(2) If the father (or mother, if the father is deceased) of a homesteader resides upon a farm in the vicinity of the land entered for by such homesteader the requirement as to residence may be satisfied by such person residing with the father or mother.

(3) If the settler has his permanent residence upon farming land owned by him in the vicinity of his homestead, the requirement may be satisfied by residence upon such land.

Before making application for patent the settler must give six months' notice in writing to the Commissioner of Dominion Lands at Ottawa, of his intention to do so.

Looseness of The Bowels.

It is very seldom during the summer months that most people are not troubled with "looseness of the bowels."

Sometimes it only goes that far, but generally it develops into Diarrhoea, Dysentery or Summer Complaint and has a tendency to weaken the whole system.

When the bowels get loosened up in this way and you wish to check the unnatural discharge without bringing on constipation, there is only one remedy to use, and that one is DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY. This remedy is not an experiment as it has been used in thousands of families during the past sixty-two years.

When you ask for Dr. Fowler's be sure you get it, as many unprincipalled druggists will try to palm off a cheap substitute on you.

Miss M. Hopkins, Roseview, Sask., writes: "I have used DR. FOWLER'S EXTRACT OF WILD STRAWBERRY and found it is all it is recommended to be for Diarrhoea and Summer Complaint. We would not be without a bottle of it in the house."

Tips For The Farmers

BY UNCLE JOSH.

Reports received here state that the grasshoppers are re-appearing in considerable numbers in Dundas, North Lanark, and one or two other places, and are stripping the leaves and heads of the oats.

"That last rain was a good one," said a farmer to the Whig, "but we need more. "The soil is very dry." Similar reports are made on every hand.

A general rainfall would work wonders to the dairy and vegetable interests.

Reports say that there will be a good supply of all kinds of fruit, but that the prices will remain firm.

It looks now as if there would be a good all-round crop of apples.

The farmer who has a good field of green corn to cut these days is a happy man.

Where do all the immigrants go? Some farmers are still on the lookout for help.

Shortage of fodder is reported by many correspondents in the Kingston district. It is said that a great deal of stock will have to be disposed of before the winter sets in.

The inspectors are after the dairymen who put water in their milk. Here's hoping that all the guilty parties will be caught.

With forest fires and electrical storms, some farmers have suffered heavy losses.

Prof. A. L. Haecker, of Nebraska experiment station, says:

The cow end of the dairy business is the big end and the most important. Here is where improvement is most needed, and where it seems slowest to come. The common cow is still in greatest number in the dairies of the land, and though she is a pretty good animal, she is not the best or most profitable. To increase her yield is as important to the dairyman as to get a good price for her product, but this fact does not seem to be generally known.

In talking with the average cow keeper he is quite likely to tell you that dairying doesn't pay, and gives for a reason that the price of butter and cream is too low. He is not likely to tell you that his cows are no good and don't pay for their keep, or that half his cows are boarders and consume the profit of the other half. The fact is, dairy products are selling at a good price, about all the public will pay. By this is meant if butter or cheese were much higher the consumption would drop off and re-act in lower prices.

Closer attention must be paid to cost of milk production. Better cows will be the cry when this is known and believed, but we are often told that the cow for the farmer is one that will be able to withstand rough treatment, and give fair results at both milk and beef production, that the dairy is not a good animal for the average farmer, etc. This has been told so often that it is believed by most people, and they have accepted it along with a lot of other unproven theories. I don't deny that a dual-purpose cow would be good to keep, but farmers don't keep them long, and don't seem to get them.

Dual purposes means two purposes, and these two functions don't blend very often in the same animal and give a paying product on both sides. To the man who is milking cows on a small farm it means a good deal whether his cows pay five dollars or fifty dollars per cow.

The difference between a cow averaging 125 lbs. of butter per year and one producing 300 lbs. is too great to ignore. We are told that farmers are not in the dairy business, but are only doing a little dairying on the side. I would call it dairy business when a farmer is keeping a herd of cows year after year and milking them as long as they give milk.

Right here is the point: Such farmers keep cows that are not bred or constituted for the profitable production of milk, and the value of their calves is but little greater than those from dairy bred animals. The fact is, it would pay better to replace such cows, even if it were necessary to sell three and buy one good animal. It is important to know the yearly yield of every cow in the herd, and whether she is paying or not, if the best results are wished for. To this end test associations are being formed in some parts of the country to work out the problem of herd improvement.

The interest taken by the dairy farmers in the work of the cow testing associations, organized by the branch of the dairy and cold storage commissioner, Ottawa, is steadily increasing. Evidence of this is seen in two or three ways. The milk record sheets being tabulated daily show a larger number of cows whose milk is being weighed and sampled six times a month, and better still there is an increase in the yield. That is to say that the second and third tests in the various localities show a marked improvement on the first.

The Toronto Weekly Sun reports: There will be no glut in the supply of hogs in this province during September and October, at all events. So much is made abundantly clear by the special report given on next page of this issue of the Sun. There may be a somewhat heavier pressure on the market in November, but after the end of December indications point to the probability of receipts running below demand.

The reason why shipments in the first two fall months will be kept within limited compass are plainly stated by correspondents and will be readily understood by all readers. The heavy mortality in spring litters caused a reduction in the number which would otherwise have been available before the end of the year, and many of those that survived will be, owing to the complete clean-up of last year's feeding grain, later in reaching market than would otherwise have been the case; there has of necessity been a holding back until new grain came in. But, because of this delay in finishing hogs which should have been ready for September and October, there will likely be a heavier run in November than would occur under normal conditions. With the opening of the new year the number of marketable hogs available will, because of the reduction in the total of the year's grain crops, almost certainly run below the average of recent years; as Sun correspondents say, there is a general disposition to reduce grain feeding to the narrowest possible limits.

The lesson from the situation seems to be that, in so far as local supplies affect local prices, we are likely to have a fairly good market in September and October, a weaker one in November, and a firming up of prices again with the opening of 1908. Of course, conditions in Denmark and Ireland, which are our chief competitors in supplying the English bacon market, or the commercial situation in England itself, may upset this calculation; but the dominant factor in the hog market is the local supply, and the facts regarding this seem to justify the forecast just made.

—UNCLE JOSH.

Baby's Hold On Life.

Baby's Own Tablets cost 25 cents a box. A box bought now may save your baby's life. Summer complaints come often without warning, and thousands of little ones die from them every summer. If children's stomach and bowels are kept in order there is little danger of these troubles, and that is just what Baby's Own Tablets do. They are good for the new-born baby or the well-grown child—and they are absolutely safe. Give your child an occasional dose of tablets, and you will keep it well. If you have not got a box of tablets in the house now, send for them at once and you may feel that your little ones are safe. Mrs. William Parrott, Myrtle, Ont., says: "My little boy suffered greatly from colic and cried almost continuously. A few doses of the tablets cured him, and now I give the tablets occasionally to prevent the trouble returning." Sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

Hibernians In Scotland.

Freeman's Journal.

At the various masses throughout Scotland, last Sunday, a circular was read from the archbishop and bishops, condemning the Ancient Order of Hibernians in that country. "The priests," says the circular, "will be good enough for the next three Sundays to announce to the congregations that the members of the Ancient Order of Hibernians cannot be admitted to the sacraments of the church. If any further information on the matter be received from Rome it will be communicated without delay. It is, therefore, obligatory for members to leave the society if they wish to remain in the Roman Catholic church."

The Results Of Poor Blood.

The whole machinery of health must be kept in order or diseases of the stomach, liver and kidneys will follow. These organs are so related that when one weakens all weaken. To keep them vigorous they must be supplied with pure, rich blood. Such blood is always the result of using Wade's Iron Tonic Pills (Laxative). They are a great nerve strengthener and blood maker. In boxes, 25c., at Wade's Drug Store. Money back if not satisfactory.

These Other Days.

There rode in the golden olden days
A horseman through the town;
And many a gentle maid would gaze
From a rose-hung casement down.

He greeted her; then, quick and glad
She seized her handkerchief
And waved until the gallant lad
Was gone; then wept for grief.

The autoists, in these iron days,
Around the corner steer;
And many a gentle maid will gaze
From a window, half in fear.

The scent borne to them on the breeze
Is not, as then, of roses;
They sniff their handkerchiefs they seize—
And hold them to their noses!

'WARE OF LADY'S KISS

MANY CAUSE GRIEF AS WELL AS JOY.

Saluting the Duchess of London Incidentally Cost 250 Men Their Lives—One Kiss Caused Six Weeks War and 1,000 Lives.

The efficacy of a fair woman's kiss was incontestably proved when, in 1794, the famous Gordon Highlanders were raised by the lovely Duchess of Gordon, who was directly instrumental in gaining a thousand recruits by the donation of a guinea and a kiss apiece. In a sense, many of these kisses may be said to have been fatal, for in an encounter with the French shortly afterward more than 250 were either killed or wounded.

Alain Chartier, the French poet, is the hero of a romantic legend. One day he sat down in a public place, and being weary and exhausted by the heat of the day, fell into a slumber. As he slept, Margaret of Scotland, the wife of the Dauphin, afterward known in history as Louis XI., chanced to pass with her attendants. She glanced at the unconscious man and recognized in him the poet whose verses she so loved. Then, motioning to her maids to be still, she gently stepped forward and, stooping, imprinted a kiss on the sleeping poet's lips.

At times, however, a kiss has been the prelude to a tragic sequel, as that bestowed in 1718 by Prince Ferdinand of Bavaria upon Princess Thyra, the near relative of a ruler of a neighboring state, where he was on a visit. This affectionate greeting, a heedless whim of the moment, was given under the very eyes of the princess' betrothed, who, naturally taking umbrage, soundly rated the thoughtless prince. Words came to blows, which resulted in a duel being arranged, and diplomatic relations between the two states were broken off. In the war which followed, although hostilities lasted but six weeks, over a thousand lives were sacrificed.

ABSENCE OF KILTS

On Edinburgh's Streets Brings Disappointment.

London Tatler.

There is one thing that always disappoints the visitor to Edinburgh, and that is a complete absence of kilts—or rather the absence of Scotsmen in kilts. If you meet a man wearing a kilt in the streets of the Queen City of the Forth it will be a grave mistake to suppose that he is the Laird of Gormuck or some other equally famous Highland chieftain. He is nothing of the sort. As a matter of fact, his name is Hodgkins, and he is employed eleven months of the year licking up envelopes for the firm of Eisenstein & Ritzheimer on the shady side of Lothbury avenue, E. C.

Another mistake which strangers are apt to make lies in supposing that the good people of Scotland talk Scotch. I shall never forget my surprise on the occasion of my first visit to Edinburgh when a policeman at the corner of Frederick street, to whom I remarked pleasantly that it was "braw, brient nicht the nicht, whateffer," told me to push off and stop asking him conundrums. Scotchmen do not as a rule talk at all. They possess the gift of silence to a really remarkable degree. I know a gillie named Donald who lives in Perthshire in whose society I have sometimes spent whole days stalking the elusive stag without his ever vouchsafing a single remark of any kind. I remonstrated with him once, pointing out that such silence as his almost amounted to taciturnity. He promised to try and cultivate a certain measure of garrulity, and after we had walked across the heather for five hours, during which time I could see that his brain was working feverishly, he suddenly turned to me and exclaimed, "Yon's a fearfu' earthquake they had in Jamaica!" after which striking effort he relapsed once more into his habitual attitude of respectful silence.

The College Girl's Rescue.

"I believe in a college education for girls," said Admiral Erbin at a dinner at Jamestown, "but the girl who comes out of college thinking that she knows a great deal has not profited by her four years' course. For, after all, it is but a smattering that college education gives us.

"Most girls know this. Many do not. The latter sort carry themselves superciliously, use big words, correct ignorant persons' grammar and fail to make a good marriage. In fact, they create a bad impression everywhere.

"Thus there was a girl—a Vassar girl—who got caught by the incoming tide out on a rock. The tide rose higher, and the girl shrieked and screamed madly for help.

"Help came at last in the shape of a grizzled old shellback, in a flat-bottomed boat. The girl, as soon as she saw the shellback, recovered her poise and said in her most affected manner:

"'Ah, I knew some succor would come if I but continued calling indefatigably.'

"The shellback scowled.

"'Wall, miss,' he said, 'if that's how ye express yer gratitood the sucker'll be durned if he don't row back without ye.'"

Another True Story.

Vino Veritas, in N. Y. Sun.

After all, John Burrough's story is the best, and, as I saw it in the Sun, it's true. A lieutenant of an English regiment stationed in Africa was hunting for big game. He was fearless, but for some reason he hesitated to shoot at the great lioness that approached. Nearer and nearer she came and was limping. The big-hearted soldier took out the thorn that he saw was in her foot and she limped away gratefully. And the Britisher forgot the incident.

Not so her ladyship. She returned the next night, looked over the roster of the regiment, and ate every officer that ranked the lieutenant, who, of course, by her active gratitude, was made a colonel.

Stevenson's Clothes.

London Tit-Bits.

Robert Louis Stevenson's get-up is thus described by a fellow-member of the Saville Club: "He wore a black flannel shirt, with a curious knitted tie twisted in a knot; he had Wellington boots, rather tight dark trousers, a pea-jacket and a white sombrero hat. But the most astonishing item of all his costume was a lady's sealskin cape, which he wore about his shoulders, fastened at the neck by a fancy brooch, which also held together a bunch of daffodils."
