DIRECTOR OF SURVEY.

Success of J. M. Bell, a Queen's Graduate.

J. M. Bell, M.A., Ph.D., F.R.G.S., formerly of Almonte, and a Queen's University graduate, is home from New Zealand where he is director of the geological survey, having succeeded Sir James Hector. He will give an address at Queen's before returning, and is also to speak at Harvard and Yale, and before the Colonial Institute, London, England. After leaving Queen's, in 1899, he had charge of an exploration party in Canada's Great Slave and Great Bear Lake region. He went to London, England, in 1901, and lectured before the Royal Geographical Society, of London. So pleased were the members that they elected him to be a fellow of their society. While in England he also gave an address in King's College, Cambridge. He was then offered the position of geologist to the Antartic exploring expedition, but declined it and accepted that of geologist to the Clergues (in the Soo district), with whom he remained till 1903, when he took charge of an exploring expedition for the Ontario government to Hudson's Bay. He attended Harvard University during the winters of 1901-02-03, obtained the degree of Ph.D., and was then appointed instructor in economic geology in Harvard.

THE PARAGRAPH PULPIT

Unitarian.

REV. C. W. CASSON, OTTAWA.

The Holiness Of Wholesomeness.

Whatever is wholesome is holy. Such is the new conception. Not always was this the popular view. Once holiness was something unnatural and unwholesome, as illustrated in the hermit life of the monks of old. But today we cannot consider such life to be holy or even religious. We know that the man who is living a natural, wholesome, full-orbed, helpful life, is much nearer our ideal of the holy man. It is such holiness that the Unitarian church endeavors to develop in the lives of its members.
