Letter to The Editor

HORSES AT LARGE IN TOWN

Dear Fellow Citizens:-

I was in Eugenia the other day visiting; while there I noticed quite a drove of horses pasturing on the roads and commons. There were about ten in this herd, and upon enquiring, I found they were let run at large all summer. Owners of these horses!—do you not know the danger of them to children while playing, of them tormenting other people by breaking into their fields and of annoying other horses in the fields, teaching them to be breechy I noticed this is the only town where horses are allowed to run. Farmers have to rent pasture for their stock during summer, and will not let them run on the roads. Horse owners!, think over this seriously. Is it right to have these horses of yours running loose? I think not, and so do some of the other fellow citizens. —Ex-Citizen.
