BEGGAR RODE IN AUTOMOBILE MADE $20 IN ONE DAY IN ONE TOWN

The Orillia News-Letter had the following interesting yarn last week.

A smartly-dressed individual drove a high-powered car into a local garage one morning last week. "Fill her up with oil and gas, tune up the engine, test the brakes, and have her all ready to go for me when I come around tonight," were the orders given to the mechanic. Thinking the visitor to be a tourist common enough hereabouts at this season, no special attention was paid to him until he noticed that he had removed an expensive-looking artificial leg and replaced his "purple and linen" with another outfit, an outfit worn thread bare and inductive of poverty, misery and desolation, despair, or what-have-you? He also took a pair of crutches from the recess in the tonneau of the car, proceeded to use these as a means of locomotion. As the motor mechanic watched the strange one disappear up the street, he wondered what was up but finally concluded it was none of his business and returned to his work. He thought no more of the affair until evening, when the one-legged man returned, changed his clothes, attached the artificial limb, paid his garage expenses and made ready to pull his freight out of town.

As he started the motor of his car the panhandler remarked, "This is an easy town. I had a good day. About twenty dollars."

This tale is true in every detail and may easily be verified. The moral is plain — "Don't believe the hard luck stories you hear."

The country is literally swarming with people who make an easy living by begging. Usually a much higher toned word than "begging" is used but its the same old thing after all.
