THE COLONIAL LIFE ASSURANCE COMPANY.
(Registered and Empowered under Act of Parliament, 7 and 8 Vic., Cap. 110.)
GOVERNOR:
THE RT. HON. THE EARL OF ELGIN AND KINCARDINE,
Governor General of Canada.
HEAD OFFICE, 19 GREAT St. JAMES STREET, MONTREAL.
BOARD OF DIRECTORS.
The Hon. Peter McGill, President of the Bank of Montreal. — The Hon. James McCord.
David Davidson, Esq., Manager of the Bank of British North America. — The Hon. W. H. Robinson.
Alexander Simpson, Esq., Cashier of the Bank of Montreal. — The Hon. A. N. Morin, Speaker of the Legislative Assembly.
John Ramsay, Esq., of the firm of Armour & Ramsay. — B. H. Lemoine, Esq., Cashier of the Peoples Bank.
James Stevenson Dunkin, Esq., Q.C. — Medical Adviser, George Campbell, M. D.
Law Agent, John Rose, Q. C.
Manager, Alexander Davidson Parker.
AMIDST the many valuable Establishments of this Country, there are none more extensively conducive to the interest of the Public, and the benefit of individuals, than well conducted Life Assurance Offices.
The VERY IMPORTANT TRUTH cannot be too widely disseminated,—it ought to be distinctly known to every family, and to every member of society, that, by the yearly payment of a moderate sum, a provision may secure to his wife, his children, his heirs, relatives, or his friends an adequate provision against the pecuniary distress which might be produced by his death.
An Assurance being effected, all risk is removed, and he has the consoling reflection, that whether he live a month, a year, or many years, he has placed his family beyond the peril of depending for daily support upon the uncertain continuance of his health and life. To the Clergy, to the Medical Men, to Lawyers, to Merchants—to Fathers whose incomes depend, in a great measure upon their powers of healthy exertion. Also, to persons of limited stated incomes, the practice of Life Assurance recommends itself, not merely as a measure of expediency, but as a Bounden Duty.
Medical Referee for Kingston.—JAMES SAMPSON, M. D.
Agent for Kingston.—Wm. GRANT, Office, Princess Street.

ODE ON THE THAMES.

FOR FLAGEOLET MUSIC.
AIR.—Violoncello obligato.

Beneath the City's thousand towers
O'er Thames in state and pride;
This way and that doth he pass,
As the tide doth ebb and flow:
And foul Mephitis ever rises
From the mud that sunk below.
Oh! oh!
This thing on Jhi not to be so;
No! no! no!

Chorus of Aldermen. Handelian fugue. Full Orchestra.

Oh! cease your idle clattle,
Since to us it is no matter,
Tho' the Thames grow thick as batter;
And for all you say,
Though Miasma play the devil,
Yet while fluids find their level,
We will wallow, roll, and revel
In our mud for aye!
Yes, in every kind of fæcula,
In sampiterna sæcula,
In sæcula, in fæcula,
In fæcula and sæcula
Hooray! hooray!

Pickings from Punch.

The Manager and the Players.

"That strain again."—Shakespeare.

The Bard of Drury Lane—removed to Covent Garden—has prelude'd in the newspapers. "Several journals," he sings, "have observed upon the omission of the names of the professors of the legitimate Drama in my programme." For our selves, we would sooner see legitimate elephants and legitimate zebras at either Drury Lane or Covent Garden than any of the legitimate little ones of the spring-cart of Thespis. We know that many very worthy old gentlemen are troubled—regularly as with winter coughs or periodical shooting of corns—with twinges of grief at what is now regularly accepted as the desecration of the boards where Garrick trod and Siddons fainted. We are above such weakness. We would see a dromedary take either of the patent stages, and feel no sympathy for any absent Glaster; and for this sufficient reason: the patents abolished, Glaster may be had at any other establishment. Now, he has a wide range; being permitted to pitch his tent anywhere, from Whitechapel to London.

[illegible] the case, Glaster's fear—if intimidated in a drama measured for his turks—is much better placed at either of the late patents than Glaster himself; whose artistic beauties are surely more visible to the naked eye at the Haymarket than at Drury Lane or Covent Garden. The Manager, however, gave handsome invitation to a certain number of the legitimate nobs—wandering stars—to come and shine in his play-bills. He says (or sings):—

"I offered Miss Helen Faucit the highest salary (£25 per week) given to that delightful actress. Miss O'Neil, when she was drawing all the world after her, but Miss Faucit demanded £15 per night, which is £90 per week."

Mrs. Nisbett is offered Mrs. Jordan's salary £25 per week; but, says the Manager—

"I was scared by her intimidation that she had recently been in the receipt of £60, and was exempt from playing in afterpieces!"—

Mrs. Nisbett being, no doubt, a staunch advocate of early closing. The Manager next turned to Mr Anderson.

"I was prepared to give Mr. Anderson £20 per week—larger terms than he had with Mr. Macready at Drury Lane; but he required £10 per night—£60 per week—with certain other dollerics, quite bijoux in their way; and recollecting that the Kean had £25 per week in the plenitude of his attraction, I felt called upon to decline the difference."

After such terms demanded, ought we to condemn the Manager if, in the course of the season, he should wander to the Zoological Gardens, and—like his brother bard, Orpheus—soothe the beasts into his own terms?

The letters in answer to the Manager have, of course, come into our hands. Punch will not print the epistles of the ladies—(the feminine pen looks ever respected!)—but the letter of Mr. Anderson is so good, is so full of the art and the actor, that justice to the noble and disinterested profession of which Mr A. is an effulgent member, compels Punch to hand down the missive to the very last posterity.

"My dear Sir,—I have to acknowledge the receipt of a letter addressed to me, and signed by yourself, but which letter, I doubt not, in the mistake of your various engagements, has doubtless been misdirected. I at once jump to this conclusion, from the fact that you offer me £20 per week to act the first business at Covent Garden Theatre. Of course, the letter was intended for some unknown person—some barn-door fledgling. By the way, I must recollect; there is a person—a young man—named Sanderson, playing at the Theatre Rural, Salisbury Plain, or Chiltern Hundreds—I forget which; and, as I said, in the hurry you doubtless misdirected the communication to Mr Sanderson.

However, my dear Sir, as we are upon the subject, in what so poor a man as Hamlet can do, you may command me. I am not aware of any insuperable objection on my part to a few nights at the Garden—say twenty to begin with. My terms are only £10 per night. And, Sir, when you recollect that I have been to America, and that even the merest butt of an actor, like the merest butt of Madeira (excuse the pun) is always improved by a sea-voyage, I do not think I ask you an unfair advance upon what I will venture to call the additional salt in my tragedy. There is no doubt that a trip across the Atlantic enlarges the histrionic faculty, and the tragedian thus increased, is entitled to a higher price; just as a full grown Michaelmas goose in the market fetches more than a green gosling.

"I can only play four parts, Hamlet for one; with a Ghost and Horatio of my own choice, and entirely new scenery by Stanfield. I next propose Macbeth, Henry the Eighth (to conclude with last scene of Wolsey,) and the melo-drama of The Lady of Lyons. I am sure we shall not disagree upon the point, but the entire cast of these plays must be submitted to my approval.

"Terms, as I said, £10 per night. I am aware that Mr. Edmund Kean received only £25 per week. Poor fellow! How the manager who robbed him could sleep in his bed, I can't tell. To be sure, Mr. Kean was merely a natural actor; never much about him. Again, when he took the situation of £25 per week, he had not visited America, where acts a gross as big as pumpkins, and then put upon his whole the price of Covent Garden boards.

"Having thus come to an absent from England, I am not aware whether it is yet the custom—as with the Opera people—to allow the principal tragedian a carriage, cages for twelve, four dressers, and sixteen wax candles. However, should this not have obtained, I know that I am in the best hands in trusting to the justice and generosity of a manager and a peer, and am, my dear Sir,

"Yours, truly ever,

"JAMES ANDERSON."

THE QUEEN IN SCOTLAND.

By our own Half-penny-a-liner.

I arrived at Aberdeen only just in time to witness the arrival of Her Majesty, who has taken us all by surprise by getting here twelve hours before we expected her. Fortunately Mr. Abernethy happened to be at the dock as the royal yacht hove to, when he, with great presence of mind, though unprepared with other refreshment, offered the Queen an Abernethy biscuit, which was graciously declined. No sooner was the intelligence once known, than the inhabitants were thrown into the greatest excitement. The Lord Provost perched himself on the end of the Jetty, surrounded by the Corporation, and after sitting there some hours, moved off on the assurance that the Queen had no intention of landing there until the next morning.

Being desirous of presenting an address, the Lord Provost and party drove down in the Captain's gig, and being hauled on to the deck, were introduced to the Queen, whose attention was called to that extraordinary animal of the human species, a city bailie. Several specimens of the tribe were shown to her Majesty, who expressed her pleasure at witnessing the curiosity, which had hitherto only fallen under her notice in Walter Scott's novels. Though I had not the impertinence to remark particularly Her Majesty's dress, I learnt from one of my fellow-reporters, who was on duty, with his eye glass and sketch book, for an Illustrated Newspaper, that the Queen wore a simple straw bonnet, a Paisley shawl, a dress of Orleans cloth, kid gloves, leather shoes, silk parasol, and muslin mittens.

The youthful Prince of Wales was dressed after your celebrated picture of him, where he is represented handing a glass of grog to a tar to drink his mamma's health.

The landing of the royal pair was a magnificent sight, and I have looked through the dictionary in vain to find words capable of describing it. Mr. Abernethy, supported by two of his own biscuits, which he had taken for luncheon, led off. The scene altogether was more brilliant, and more pandemonic, drawn up in single files—including the old married flies—hobbled along with their silver hair sparkling in the sun, the effect was truly electrical.

Our reporter goes on at considerable length; but we are so disgusted with his vulgar and inquisitive intrusion upon the leisure and amusement of Royalty, that we omit the remainder of his account, and request that he will send us no more of his impertinence.

THE QUEEN AND PRINCE AT STONE.—We take the following from the Builder:—

"A statue of Venus Rising from the Sea was hotly bid for by two Irish agents, until it was knocked down at a considerable higher price than its value. The report is that the agents represented the Queen and Prince Albert, who each wanted to present it to the other. Prince Albert was the purchaser."

We congratulate his Royal Highness. It is not always that the husband has the last word.

☞ THE PILOT THAT DOES NOT WEATHER THE STORM.—Lord John is averse to deputations. You may write, you may send in petitions, you may memorialise, but you must not annoy him with questions. It is with the vessel of the State seemingly as with other vessels: "No one is allowed to speak to the Man at the Helm."

ROYAL CARRIAGES AND CATTLE.

The Edinburgh Witness, in reference to the Queen's visit to Scotland, says:—

"The Royal horses and carriages selected for the use of Her Majesty and Prince Albert on their visit to Balmoral, arrived in the harbour of Aberd
