Word was received here on Friday last of the sudden death of John Bemrose at South Saskatoon, when he was run over by a train and instantly killed. Vice-Pres.—G. B. Welton.

Treasurer—Ed. Patton.

Two dozen lacrosse sticks arrived the first of the week and distributed to the boys to learn the rudiments of Canada's national game. After the lads learn how to handle the sticks an organizer from the O.A.L.A. will come up in the spring and organize a league in this district. Lacrosse has not been played in this district for quite a number of years and we would be pleased to have this great game played in Flesherton. The young lads are here and if they keep practicing there is no reason why they should not be able to field a good team.

Mr. Burrell and his two small sons were riding home in a buggy when they were struck by a car driven by Mr. H. Knott of Markdale. The boys were not seriously injured, but Mr. Burrell sustained a fractured skull. He was operated upon on Tuesday night, but the operation proved in vain. Mr. Burrell did not regain consciousness after the accident.

Mr. Burrell was born in Euphrasia township and was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Burrell and had lived in the vicinity of Markdale all his life. He is survived by his widow, formerly Miss Nellie Stevenson; four children, Mary, Robert, William and Donald; his father and mother; three brothers Jack, Archie and Bert; and one sister, Mrs. Alex. OUR BELOVED DEAD

PIONEERS OR FOUNDERS OF FLESHERTON

(By DR. R. H. HENDERSON)

I desire to refer in a most special way to the oldest residents or founders of the village, as well as some others of a little later date, all of whom have long since passed oc this stage of action.

The following arranged alphabetically, are the names of the first residents of the village, viz:

Armstrongs, Bellamys, Blackburns, Campbells, Christoes, Clarks, Claytons, Fields, Fleshers, Heards, Hendersons, Hoopers, Munshaws, Neils, Richardsons, Strains, Sproules and VanDusens.

I have had the geat privilege of a long and somewhat intimate acquaintance with them, and their lives were an inspiration to those whose privilege it was to be associated with them before their demise.

The few words I may say will be characterized by restraint and simplicity. Greatness in every realm attains its best in simplicity, and this is especially true of character. There is something of childish simplicity about even the greatest.

Those who knew these sainted pioneers most intimately in their homes, or in their chosen professions or callings, knew them to be genuinely sincere. Sincerity is not one of the minor virtues. Sincerity is no mere Sunday grace or adornment which we may do without. There is a moral elevation by the example set by such men and women which compels our respect. They believed in the dignity of work, because work meant service. Their daily avocation was a sphere of service. They knew that peace and happiness depended largely upon the amount of conscience they put into their allotted task. They were devoted hsubands of gracious and loving wives.

The love which survives the tomb is one of the noblest attributes of man, and though some sorrow may throw a passing cloud over the bright hour of gaiety or burst of revelry as on the present home-coming celebration, there is a voice from the tomb sweeter even than the sweetest song, and there is a remembrance of the dead to which we turn even from the charm and association with the living.

How beautiful is the memory of the dead! How it subdues all the harshness that grows up within us in our daily intercourse with the world! How it meets our unkindness, softens our pride, kindles our deepest love and tasks our highest aspirations!

How friend follows friend into the lonely dwelling place of the dead! Every year witnesses the departure of some one whom we knew and loved, and when we recall the names of all who have been dear to us in life, how reverently we speak their names. Then let us emulate these much beloved and unforgotten souls; and if we have been guilty of causing one unmerited pang to that true heart which now lies cold and still in mother earth, then let us now not forget that every unkind look, every ungracious word, every ungentle action, will some time come thronging back upon our memories, sorrowing and repentant, pouring forth the unavoidable tear, more deep, more bitter, because unheard and unavailing. —R. H. H.
