ART OF ADVERTISING.—Horace Greeley, of New York, says:—The most successful business men in this city are those who have advertised liberally and constantly. A small advertisement constantly appearing is better than a display column occasionally.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise;
to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in,
while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers.
Some people will learn by observation,
others will not.—Daily Palladium.

RAPPE, WEBER, & Co., MANUFACTURERS OF
GRAND OVERSTRUNG SQUARE
PIANOS,
Corner of King & Princess Streets
KINGSTON, ONTARIO.
RAPPE, WEBER, & Co. announce to the Public that they are now in possession of facilities for manufacturing Pianos unsurpassed, if equalled, by any in the Dominion.
The members of the Firm are Practical Piano Makers, and are anxious to establish their success in manufacturing enterprise by careful workmanship rather than by mere speculation.
They are able skilfully to superintend every department, and are prepared to guarantee every instrument they sell.
For strength of manufacture and materials, beauty of finish, and durability and excellence of tone, they challenge the Dominion to produce superior instruments; and while they claim for their work every excellence that can be expected from skillful and enterprising workmen, they beg to announce that their resources are sufficiently ample to enable them to compete in prices with any speculator in Pianos.
The Subscribers keep no Travelling Agent.
All orders addressed to the Subscribers, or sent through any respectable Music Dealer, will receive attention. Orders through mail will be attended to as if selected in person.

Who is Mrs. Winslow?
As this question is frequently asked, we will simply say that she is a lady who, for upwards of thirty years, has untiringly devoted her time and talents as a female Physician and nurse, principally among children. She has especially studied the constitution and wants of this numerous class, and as a result of this effort, and practical knowledge, obtained in a lifetime spent as nurse and physician, she has compounded a Soothing Syrup for children teething. It operates like magic—giving rest and health, and is, moreover, sure to regulate the bowels. In consequence of this article, Mrs Winslow is becoming world-renowned as a benefactor of her race; children certainly do rise up and bless her; especially is this the case in this city. Vast quantities of the Soothing Syrup are daily sold and used here. We think Mrs Winslow has immortalized her name by this invaluable article, and we sincerely believe thousands of children have been saved from an early grave by its timely use, and that millions yet unborn will share its benefits, and unite in calling her blessed. No MOTHER has discharged her duty to her suffering little one, in our opinion, until she has given it the benefit of Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup. Try it, mothers—TRY IT NOW.—Ladies' Visitor, New York City.
Sold by all druggists. 25 cents a bottle.
Be sure and call for "Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup,"
Having the fac-simile of "Curtis & Perkins" on the outside wrapper. All others are base imitations.

THE INFANT SCHOOL IN MONTREAL.
Montreal, October 7.—I have just returned from visiting the Nazareth Infant School in Catherine street—an exceedingly interesting Catholic institution, said to be an unique thing of the kind on this continent. I had heard mention made of some place in town where a number of orphans and children of the poor were taught and trained by the nuns, and where some poor Catholics are accustomed to leave their children in the morning as they went to work, and return for them in the afternoon.
Dr. Hingston, an eminent surgeon in the city, and himself a Catholic, told me it was the Nazareth Infant School, and kindly furnished me with a note of introduction to the preceptress (the "Rev. Sœur Gaudry"), to whose devotion, he says, the success of the institution is due.
I found my way to the place this afternoon, rang the bell at the outer gate, and on presenting the note was at once admitted. I had not been many minutes in the waiting room (where a kind, motherly woman, who had been darning stockings, took my overcoat from me, the day being wet, hung it up to dry, when the nun of whom I had heard so much made her appearance. Sister Gaudry is a little, spare woman, quiet and yet earnest in her manner, and with a face so full of gentleness and love, that her influence over the children became intelligible in a moment. She received me very cordially, told me the children were just going to begin their afternoon exercises, and led me into a large hall, which she called the recreation room, where about a hundred little boys were ranged on one side and about the same number of little girls on the other. At the tinkle of a signal bell they all rose and saluted us. At another signal they faced round, and at a third the foremost boy and the foremost girl moved forward, the rest following, and thus the whole school filed past with military precision across the hall and into the opposite room. This was the school. Here they arranged themselves on long seats that rose like a gallery to the wall behind. A low rail running up the middle separated the girls from the boys.
Two little beds stood side by side upon the floor in front.
I asked Sister Gaudry what these were for?
"Those," she said, "are for any of the children that may fall asleep during the exercises."
Happy children, thought I, their lines have fallen in pleasant places. We had a very different programme prepared for us in the old school at home.
At a signal from Sister Gaudry, made with a little pair of wooden clappers, the children rose. At a second signal they all went down upon their knees, and folding their hands reverently, repeated a little prayer in French. The lessons now began.
Sister Gaudry took a long pointer and turned to the wall behind, on which hung a large illustrated chart of the alphabet. Beside the letter "A," for example, there was the picture of a cat; and when this letter was pointed the whole two hundred voices sang together a couplet, to this effect—
"This is the vowel a,"
Which we sound in chat."
The whole alphabet was sung through in this way—singing being found very useful in sustaining the attention and helping the memory. After a lesson in arithmetic, Sister Gaudry took her place behind a stand with its face sloping towards the children, and crossed with bars to keep anything placed on it from slipping off. On this she begun to arrange letters printed on cards—all the children, in concert, naming the letters as they were exhibited, and the words into which they were arranged. One of the little girls was then called by name. The child came down the steps like a little lady, bowed to one side, then to the other, with exquisite politeness, and looked up at Sister Gaudry. The nun laid a card upon the desk.
"What is that?"
"V," said the child.
"And that?"
"That is 'L.'"
She went on thus till the word "Vivent" was formed, and finally a sentence referring to some ladies who were present, and to myself.
"Read that now," said the nun.
The child read in a clear voice, "Vivent ce monsieur et ces dames."
The nun looked up at the school.
"Vivent ce monsieur et ces dames," shouted the hundred and ninety-nine voices behind.
A still more interesting exercise followed. Sister Gaudry exhibited a picture on the stand, and said,
"What is this?"
The two hundred little voices answered, "That is David killing Goliath."
"Tell the story," said the nun.
Thereupon the whole school, with eyes kindling and faces gradually becoming more excited, began to recite the story in concert, in some such style as this:—
"Goliath was the giant of Gath. He came down into the valley and defied the armies of the living God. Young David went down to meet him, with only a sling and five smooth pebbles from the brook. He took one of the pebbles, he put it in his sling [here the two hundred children imitated the gesture], he swung it round [the two hundred little arms were now whirling in the air], he threw it and struck the giant on the forehead [the two hundred hands slapped the two hundred little foreheads]. The giant fell; David ran up, drew the giant's sword [arms all up] and cut off the giant's head, [and in a moment the forest of little arms came down with a cut]."
The eagerness and excitement with which this performance was gone through it would be difficult to describe.
Next came lessons in geography, grammar and geometry. There was one exceedingly small boy, looking all the smaller from being dressed in knickerbockers, who came hopping down from a back bench on being called, made his little bow, folded his arms like a minute Napoleon, and looked up at Sister Gaudry as if ready for anything that might be asked of him, from the first axiom to the differential calculus. He was asked to point out the pyramids, the cone and the square, and to name the parallelogram and the equilateral triangle, which he did promptly, his little French tongue getting round the "long nebbis
