
Don't buy any car until you have driven Chevrolet

IT'S all very well to listen to So-and-so's opinion of car values, but after all, the person whose opinion counts most is YOURSELF.

It's all very well to sit back and wonder how Chevrolet can produce a really high-class Six . . put a high-compression, valve-in-head engine in it . . employ Fisher Body genius to create and build a series of magnificent bodies for it . . equip it in the most detailed and up-to-the-minute fashion . . and sell it at the price of a four.

The unmatched resources of General Motors, backing up Chevrolet's own tremendous facilities, explain all that, of course. But how much more satisfying to test it all out for yourself . . behind the wheel of the new Chevrolet Six.

That is why we urge you . . no matter how many nice things you have heard or read about Chevrolet . . to DRIVE CHEVROLET before you buy any car.

If you don't sell yourself a Chevrolet, nobody else is going to do it. Please don't feel you are obligating yourself in any way. It's a pleasure for us to place a Chevrolet Six at your disposal.

IT'S BETTER BECAUSE IT'S CANADIAN

Miss Macphail's Letters

The Assembly is drawing to a close. On the whole real gains have been made and yet one feels disappointed that even more was not accomplished. The signing of the pain. Next in importance I would be inclined to put the work of Lord Cecil on Disarmament.

According to the Covenant of the League of Nations, Article S, the maintenance of peace requires the reduction of national armaments to the lowest point consistent with national safety and the enforcement by common action of international obligation. Yet in the ten years little progress has been made toward disarmament on land. Three years ago a Committee called the Preparatory Disarmament committee was appointed to canvass the subject and to prepare drafts to be submitted to a general Disarmament conference which was to be called as soon as the Committee had completed its work. This Committee has met many times, the last time being in April of this year. Two proposals for limitations of land armament was submitted : one by France asking for budgetary limitation, (the amount of money spent on armaments to be reduced), the other by Germany asking for limitation by direct and specific means(reducing the quantity of war material). To the amazement of those who followed the proceedings of the Committee, neither of these plans for disarmament were voted upon. A third resolution was submitted by Mr Gibson of the United States saying that agreement could not be reached on either of the other two and that disarmament must be sought by means of publicity of the expenditure in each country. This was called a compromise but any intelligent person can see that it was in reality rank failure to do anything about disarmament, at the same time closing the subject by giving the military powers the opportunity of saying that the matter was settled. A Chinese member of this Preparatory Commission and also a member of the Third Committee (Disarmament) graphically described the scene last April when the Gibson resolution was submitted: "A shudder and a murmur passed through the Committee, the shudder caused by the quivering conscience of every member".

Lord Robert Cecil saw the grave danger and by a resolution on the Disarmament Committee opened up again the whole question. He gladly stated that progress toward disarmament on the sea and in the air had been or was being made, but pointed out that in regard to armies we had not advanced one inch since the spring of 1927 and that perhaps an unfriendly critic might say that in some respects we had gone backward. Yet in his opinion the reduction of armies was the most essential of all since the history of the last hundred years or more proved that the bulk of the fighting had always been done on land. In no other way could an advance be made into the enemy country. He pleaded with the members o the Disarmament Committee to take the action necessary, to have the whole question of land disarmament opened up again so that when the Disarmament Conference was called there would be something of real value to be submitted. He pointed out that the calling together of the whole world to consider disarmament would not bring the result we desire unless the program submitted to it contained plans that would actually lead to disarmament. He was very ably supported by Sir George Foster, the Scandinavian Countries, China and Germany, and rather warmly opposed by France, the little Entente, Italy Greece, Spain, and Japan. He did not press his resolution to a vote, but he won his point. The whole subject will be opened up again at the next meeting of the Preparatory Disarmament Commission of which, I am glad to say, Lord Cecil is now a member.

After the Committee have finished their work their reports are submitted to the Asesmbly for their approval, which they seem always to get. The last few days of the Assembly therefore are quite dull.

Mlle. Vacaresco, a delegate from Roumania who has been coming to the League for ten years, addressed the Assembly and at the conclusion of her eloquent speech at least eight men of different countries lined up by the side of the platform and each in turn kissed her hand, bowing very low. I inquired the reason and informed that Europeans consider it a mark of honor and respect. Last night at an intellectual dinner, to which I was oddly enough invited,given by Mr. Hugh Dalton (parliamentary Under-Secretary of Foreign Affairs for Great Britain) there was among the guests a golden blond German who in sympathy is close to Stresemann. During the evening I told this disciple of Stresemann that I had wanted to meet him, since for ten days I had sat immediately behind him in the Assembly. To my surprise he sprang to his feet and, bowing low, kissed my hand. It was quite thrilling!

Canada has an office in Geneva which is situated near the Secretariat and on the boulevard facing the lake. It is staffed with three men and two women, headed by Dr. W. A. Riddell. Each of them has done everything it was possible to do to assist the Canadian delegation to do good work and to be happy while here. Canada is fortunate in having these efficient and devoted citidens in this international centre.

On Sunday Dr. and Mrs. Riddell took me on a motor trip into the mountains. I was very anxious to visit the home of one of the farmers, so Dr. Riddell and I walked up the side of the mountain for at least a mile, to a farm home. It was typical in structure, the house and barn being under one roof, with a balcony running above what we would call a shed. The man of the house came out and the three of us sat on a sleigh and had a comfortable chat, Dr. Riddell interpreting for me. The farmer was dressed in his "Sunday clothes" but over his coat he wore a pretty grey chambray smock, shirred at the shoulders and across the back. It was a little longer than his coat and had two pockets which he found very useful for his hands. Soon we saw an old white haired lady coming down the steep incline carrying on her back in a canvas knapsack a load which turned out to be cabbages. She had been working in the fields and was not in the least dressed up. She had a kind face They stay on the side of the mountain until Christmas time, and then they take their stock and go into the village in the valley. All the farmers have pasture rights on the mountain where no crop is sown, and to these common lands the cattle are sent with herdsmen during the summer months. Their homes in comfort do not compare in any way with ours. Coming back to Geneva we passed many people riding bicycles, who had strapped to their backs the cans of milk, which they were taking to the village or to the factory. Bicycles play a big part in the life of this city. Very comfortable long shaped baskets fit the back and in these the people carry all sorts of things.

I am leaving to-night for Paris and with only a four hour stop will go on to London. Much as I have enjoyed my stay in Europe, I gladly sail for home on the Duchess of Bedford on September 27th.
