GUIZOT'S ADMONITION.

Of all men in Europe, M. Guizot is the one entitled to have the last word on the question of Peace and War. The mere fact that the last Prime Minister of Louis Philippe's reign comes forth from his 20 years' retirement, that he breaks through the course of ascetic studies with which he wishes the weariness of a well-spent old age, gives M. Guizot's utterance all the earnestness of a warning from beyond the grave. M. Guizot summons both France and Prussia before the tribunal of public opinion, as responsible for the unsettled state of men's minds in Europe. There is, he thinks, throughout this part of the world an anxious longing for peace, and there is a feverish apprehension of immediate war—an apprehension arising from mutual jealousy and animosity of the two great Powers bordering upon each other on the Rhine. M. Guizot can see there no just cause for this universal nervousness. At all events, he can trace the cause to no country and no person. If war comes out it will not be the fault of Prussia, and not of Bismarck, to whom, though he designates him as "the one ambitious and bold man in Europe." M. Guizot gives credit for pacific intentions, and will also not be the fault of France, and not of the Emperor Napoleon, "whose experience of disappointment and reverses," he thinks, "ought to be a heavy check on the most obstinate optimist and idealist." The difficulties of the present, M. Guizot's showing, are the consequences of the errors of the past. They are the results of the indecision of the Emperor of the French, and of the undecided policy of his Government. M. Guizot thinks that Germany must needs shrink from war, because she requires leisure for the amalgamation of her discordant elements. This is only true if war is at all probable; for "if war is to come sooner or later," says Bismarck, and for a variety of good reasons, "the sooner the better." Perhaps many Gordian knots not otherwise to be solved; and nothing could, perhaps, better cement German unity than the blood spilt in defence of the common fatherland. It is for "Messieurs de France" to fire first, and, as M. Guizot repeatedly asserts, there is in France no party, no man, that would overthrow a peace policy. It depends upon the will of the Emperor Napoleon, and upon him alone." The Emperor, by his anxiety to place himself in a position to undertake war, has as helplessly been drifting into war as if he had been a prey to an irresistible fatality. M. Guizot believes that the Emperor is "rather inclined to fear than to war." This is every man's opinion; but no less general is the conviction that owing to his melancholy irresolution the Emperor is scarcely a free agent. M. Guizot refers to an interview which he had with the Founder of the Second Empire in 1855. "He was struck," he says, "with the perplexity of the Emperor's mind." With all the other good qualities, which the statesman of the July monarchy was ready to do justice, "with his excessive anxiety, with his moderation, with the modesty of his desires and views," the far-sighted philosopher detected that fatal indecision of character which was already the stumbling-block in the Emperor's career, but which has been growing upon him as "age has been coming on, and as mysticism and fatalism have been crushed under the burden of disappointment and defeat." With peaceful prospects, M. Guizot thinks, armaments should be reduced in a peace footing. He points to disarmament as the only measure calculated to allay misgiving. The aged statesman and historian has not been by any means the first to arrive at that conclusion. Let us hope that the authority of his voice may work that impression which the utterance of public opinion under any other form has failed to produce.

Henry Ward Beecher tells, in the Ledger, that when he was a youngster of nine winters he had a long checked apron put on him, and was sent to do the housework—to wash the table, to wait on others during meals, to clear off the things, shake and fold the tablecloth, wash the dishes, scour the knives and forks, sweep up the carpet, "dust the chairs and furniture," &c., &c. "Of these tasks," says he, "I soon added the trimming of towels and napkins, and of other fabrications—bags, ticks, and such like. During this period I also continued my stable work. Mr Beecher avers that the knowledge obtained in this way has been of incalculable value to him all his life, and he thinks that men should be made acquainted with such things in these days, when women are emerging from the household, and learning trades, professions, and arts. We always thought the woman's rights movement would come to this at last.—N. Y. Times.

Whether or not the Anglo-Saxon race, as Dr. Knox has asserted, hope ultimately to be masters of the world, there is no indication that the language common to the people of that descent is rapidly becoming predominant in the world of modern civilization. In the whole enormous tract of North America, in the Australian lands, spacious as all Europe, English is the mother tongue, and is never likely to be superseded. Immigrants from other European countries merge their own language in ours after a very short period. In all the seaboard of commercial lands, in South America, Africa, China, and in islands scattered over the Great Pacific, not to mention our own extensive Indian possessions, English is the language most used by natives in addition to their own. Moreover, as all living tongues are by transplantation and use by successive generations, it will probably assume a special character in different lands, but substantially it will be English, and day by day it spreads more widely and takes root firmly. Its only rival, French, like the country of its habitation, is too complete in itself to spread by its centrifugal force. From its intrinsic excellence, its perfect construction, its conversational graces, its purity and clearness, it will always be with the people themselves what it is, an objet de luxe, the language of elegant literature, the favourite of Courts and drawing-rooms; but it is never likely to be in general use out of France. English, with its freedom of construction, laxity of grammar, its rough and ready facility in use, and its fecundity, establishes itself with the quickness and tenacity of twitch-grass wherever it is once introduced.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Coughs and Colds.

Sudden changes of climate are sources of Pulmonary, Bronchial, and Asthmatic affections. Experience having proved that simple remedies often act speedily and certainly when taken in the early stages of the disease, recourse should at once be had to "Brown's Bronchial Troches," or Lozenges. Few are aware of the importance of checking a cough, or "common cold," in its first stage. That which in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy, if neglected soon attacks the Lungs. "Brown's Bronchial Troches," or Cough Lozenges, allay irritation which induces coughing, having a direct influence on the affected parts. As there are imitations, be sure to obtain the genuine. Sold by all dealers in Medicines at 25 cents a box.

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

If so, go at once and get a bottle of Mrs WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on the face of the earth who has ever tised it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price 25 cents. Sold everywhere.

Kingston, 23rd September, 1868.

ADDRESS TO THE NERVOUS AND DEBILITATED, whose sufferings have been protracted from hidden causes, and whose cases require prompt treatment to render existence desirable: If you are suffering, or have suffered from involuntary discharges, what effect does it produce upon your general health? Do you feel weak, debilitated, easily tired? Does a little extra exertion produce palpitation of the heart? Does your liver, or urinary organs, or your kidneys, frequently get out of order? Is your urine sometimes thick, milky, or flocky, or is it ropy on settling? Or does a thick scum rise to the top? Or is a sediment at the bottom after it has stood awhile? Do you have spells of short breathing or dyspepsia? Are your bowels constipated? Do you have spells of fainting, or rushes of blood to the head? Is your memory impaired? Is your mind constantly dwelling upon this subject? Do you feel dull, listless, moping, tired of company, of life? Do you wish to be left alone, to get away from everybody? Does any little thing make you start or jump? Is your sleep broken or restless? Is the lustre of your eye as brilliant? The bloom on your cheek as bright? Do you enjoy yourself in society as well? Do you pursue your business with the same energy? Do you feel as much confidence in yourself? Are your spirits dull and flagging, given to fits of melancholy? If so, do not lay it to your liver or dyspepsia. Have you restless nights? Your back weak, your knees weak, and have but little appetite, and you attribute this to dyspepsia or liver-complaint?

Now, reader, self-abuse, venereal diseases badly cured, and sexual excesses, are all capable of producing a weakness of the generative organs. The organs of generation, when in perfect health, make the man. Did you ever think that those bold, defiant, energetic, persevering, successful business-men are always those whose generative organs are in perfect health? You never hear such men complain of being melancholy, of nervousness, of palpitation of the heart. They are never afraid they cannot succeed in business; they don't become sad and discouraged; they are always polite and pleasant in the company of ladies, and look you and them right in the face—none of your downcast looks or any other meanness about them. I do not mean those who keep the organs inflated by running to excess. These will not only ruin their constitutions, but also those they do business with or for.

How many men, from badly-cured diseases, from the effects of self-abuse and excesses, have brought about that state of weakness in those organs that has reduced the general system so much as to induce almost every other disease—idiocy, lunacy, paralysis, spinal affections, suicide, and almost every other form of disease which humanity is heir to, and the real cause of the trouble scarcely ever suspected, and have doctored for all but the right one.

Diseases of these organs require the use of a Diuretic.

HELMBOLD'S FLUID EXTRACT BUCHU

Is the great Diuretic, and is a certain cure for diseases of the Bladder, Kidneys, Gravel, Dropsy, Organic Weakness, Female Complaints, General Debility, and all diseases of the Urinary Organs, whether existing in Male or Female, from whatever cause originating, and no matter of how long standing.

If no treatment is submitted to, Consumption or Insanity may ensue. Our flesh and blood are supported from these sources, and the health and happiness, and that of Posterity, depends upon prompt use of a reliable remedy.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu, established upward of 18 years, prepared by H. T. HELMBOLD, Druggist, 494, New York, and 104, South 10th Street, Philadelphia, Pa. PRICE—$1,25 per bottle, or six bottles for $6 50, delivered to any address. Sold by all Druggists everywhere.

None are genuine unless done up in steel-engraved wrapper, with fac-simile of my Chemical Warehouse, and signed

H. T. HELMBOLD.
