THE ROARIN' GAME.

To the rink, to the rink, to the curlin' rink,
Let us haste, for the ice is gude;
And the roarin'stanes come down the lanes,
An' the skips shout clear and lood.

"Sweep her up, sweep her up, mon, the stane is slow;
Can ye no get it ower the hog?
Ye ha' swept gude an' hard, aye, a verra fine guard;
That'll gie them a bit o' a jog.

"Ho! a narra ane that, but come on wi'the broom,
Do your best now to get her clean by;
If the new curlers fa', shove their legs oot, awa',
Aweel, mon, a verra gude try.

"It's the last end noo, mind, get them in on the ice,
For the win oot we need to lie three;
Mon, that's five i' the hoose! but we mustna be croose,
Losh- his last stane's a draw tae the tee.

"Noo,then, skip, dae yir best, it is fair up tae you,
It'll tak' a' yir skill tae win through
So ye'll gie carefu' heed, for the ice has a lead,
An' the port is a narrow ane, too."

So he backs doon the ice an' he scans every yard,
He examines the port o'er and o'er.
"Noo, a little less ice," aan' then in a trice
The stane's comin' doon wi' a roar

"Oh, he's got it jist richt! No, he's narra the port!
What, the lead's brought him straicht! mon alive"
Noo, oor hands they are gripped, for the inner is chipped,
An' we lie on the ice a gude ive.

Oh, the curlin' game is a bonnie game
It's a gran' freenly game ava'!
Lifts oor haitts wi' gude cheer, notches up oor low gear;
Would I miss ony match? Hoots, awa'!

Travellers, Zoologists, and photographers are reporting that wherever they go in hot climates and in cold,in the north and south, on land and in the ocean,wild life is being destroyed at a far far greater rate than it can be reproduced. By motor car, by aeroplane with wireless, by trade, by sportsmen, by poison, by guns, by traps, by every conceivable device, earth's wild creatures are steadily and surely being weed out of existence."
