SWEET NELLY HUNTINGDON.

BY MRS. FORESTER.

"I'll tell you what we can do," said Capt. Wellesly, feeling for her distress, and yet hating the thought of having to leave her at all; "I will carry you to some place where you will be within call of your people, and then you can put on one shoe, and the absence of the other will be explained by the pain of your foot. But before we part I want you to promise me something—will you?"

"If I can," she answered, with a wistful look in his face, surely loth to part with this newfound happiness.

"A few days hence, when your foot is better, and you are able to walk, will you come here once at this time? I shall watch every day for you."

Nelly hesitated. A clandestine meeting with a stranger seemed almost a crime to her innocent mind.

"Do," he urged, with strong entreaty in his tones. "Say yes."

"Yes," said Nelly, blushing deeply, divided between happiness and remorse.

Then the young man lifted her once more in his strong arms, and carried her to the long beech avenue that ran at the back to the big flower garden.

"Good by," said he, regretfully. "You promise to come?"

"Yes," whispered Nelly, almost inaudibly.

Captain Wellesly took her hand and raised it to his lips. He would very much have liked to ask for one little shoe to keep as a souvenir, but there was something in this little maiden's frank innocence that abashed him more than the haughtiest reserve of a town-bred woman could have done. But as he took his way back to the brook, he found one little bronze slipper had been dropped on the road, and he picked it up eagerly and kissed it.

"I will keep it until she comes again," he said to himself, quite glad at the thought of seeing her once more, and yet impatient of all the long hours that must come between.

CHAPTER III.

When her new friend left her, Miss Nelly determined, most imprudently, to get home by herself as best she could. Great then, was her dismay when she discovered the loss of her shoe. But there was a long strip of grass that led to the door of the housekeeper's room, and along this the poor child limped slowly and painfully, her white face whiter than ever.

Nurse flew to her at once.

"Lord'a mussy upon us, Miss Nelly! Why, whatever's the matter?"

"I've sprained my foot," murmured the girl, her tell-tale face betrayed her.

"But how, deary?—how did you do it?"

"If I tell you, will you promise me faithfully never to let any one know?"

"Miss Nelly!" cried Wilson, aghast, when the story was told; "and you walked home all the way from the brook, with your foot in that state? Why, it's enough to make you lame for life. And where's your other shoe?"

"I must have dropped it."

"I'll send Foley to look for it to-night. There's the first dinner-bell."

"Oh, Wilson! how shall I keep it from papa?"

"You go in first, before he comes out of the library, and I'll be bound he won't ask no questions."

Nelly limped into the dining-room, and took her seat at the table before the next bell rang.

"What, you first, Nelly?" said her father, coming in just as the clock struck.

He was a tall, spare man, with fine features, that would have made him handsome but for the air of gloomy severity that frowned from his thoughtful brows. This severity was a characteristic of the men of the Huntingdon race. They were kind and generous enough in the main, but stern, implacable, and utterly unyielding; a race to be staunch friends and bitter foes—better fraught, indeed, for good haters than good lovers. No wonder all their women-kind stood in awe of them.

Nelly's father had for some years past devoted himself entirely to literary pursuits, so that she had enjoyed very little of his society and companionship. They met at meal times when he would ask her a few indifferent questions, and she would answer them, and she was too much afraid of him to demonstrate any particular affection.

"Mayn't I read for you, or write, papa?" she had asked timidly sometimes; but the response was always:

"No, thank you, my dear; seclusion would not be good for you. Run about and breathe the fresh air and ride your horse. I shall be very well."

But on this evening, when she would fain have been silent, her father was unusually talkative.

"Where have you been to-day, Nelly?" he asked, as soon as he had taken his seat.

Why he should have asked that question to-day, of all others, the first time it had ever been inconvenient to reply!

"Out in the woods, papa, and I—I strained my foot a little."

"How did you manage that?"

"Put my foot in a hole, and twisted the ankle."

"That comes of your romping ways, I suppose. You really are too old to go racing about now, Nelly. And, Nelly, I have something to say to you."

"Yes, papa;" and her heart beat thick and fast with a great dread.

"I don't wish you to go anywhere near the lower part of the wood for the next month. I hear Lord Langholme is coming to the Court with a party of men, and I don't choose you to be seen by them."

Nelly stopped her head over her plate in an agony. Could her father know anything?

"Lord Langholme is not a desirable acquaintance for young ladies," proceeded Mr Huntingdon, with the frown depending on his brow; "and as he runs after every petticoat he sees, he might wish to force the honour of his acquaintance upon you, and I'd sooner see you dead than have anything to do with him."

"You need not be afraid, papa," said Nelly, raising her head with spirit. "I would not speak to Lord Langholme. I

Coughs and Colds.

Sudden changes of climate are sources of Pulmonary, Bronchial, and Asthmatic affections. Experience having proved that simple remedies often act speedily and certainly when taken in the early stages of the disease, recourse should at once be had to "Brown's Bronchial Troches," or Lozenges. Few are aware of the importance of checking a cough, or "common cold," in its first stage. That which in the beginning would yield to a mild remedy, if neglected soon attacks the Lungs. "Brown's Bronchial Troches," or Cough Lozenges, allay irritation which induces coughing, having a direct influence on the affected parts. As there are imitations, be sure to obtain the genuine. Sold by all dealers in Medicines at 25 cents a box.

Mothers! Mothers!! Mothers!!!

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with the excruciating pain of cutting teeth? If so, go at once and get a bottle of Mrs WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately—depend upon it; there is no mistake about it. There is not a mother on the face of the earth who has ever used it, who will not tell you at once that it will regulate the bowels, and give rest to the mother and relief and health to the child, operating like magic. It is perfectly safe to use in all cases, and pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female physicians and nurses in the United States. Price 25 cents. Sold everywhere.

Be sure and call for

"Mrs Winslow's Soothing Syrup,"

having the fac-simile of "Curtis & Perkins" on the outside wrapper. All others are base imitations.

EFFECT OF ADVERTISING.—It is amusing at times to observe the stores of the merchants who don't advertise; to see the anxious proprietors looking into the streets and see the people go by, wondering why they don't come in, while the stores of their neighbours who do advertise are thronged with customers. Some people will learn by observation, others will not.—Daily Palladium.

ART OF ADVERTISING.—Horace Greeley, of New York, says:—The most successful business men in this city are those who have advertised liberally and constantly. A small advertisement constantly appearing is better than a display column occasionally.

TO A YOUNG MERCHANT—When you pay more for the rent of your business house than for advertising your business, you are pursuing a false policy. If you can do business, let it be known."—FRANKLIN.

WOMAN.

FEMALES, owing to the peculiar and important relations which they sustain, their peculiar organization, and the offices they perform, are subject to many sufferings. Freedom from these contributes in no small degree to their happiness and welfare, for none can be happy who are ill. Not only so, but no one of these various female complaints can long be suffered to run on without involving the general health of the individual, and are long producing permanent sickness and premature decline. Nor is it pleasant to consult a physician for the relief of these various delicate affections, and only upon the most urgent necessity will a true woman so far sacrifice her greatest charm as to do this. The sex will then thank us for placing in their hands simple specifics which will be found efficacious in relieving and curing almost every one of those troublesome complaints peculiar to the sex.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT OF BUCHU.

Hundreds suffer on in silence, and hundreds of others apply vainly to druggists and doctors, who either merely tantalize them with the hope of a cure or apply remedies which make them worse. I would not wish to assert anything that would do injustice to the afflicted, but I am obliged to say that although it may be produced from excessive exhaustion of the powers of life, by laborious employment, unwholesome air and food, profuse menstruation, the use of tea and coffee, and frequent childbirth, it is far oftener caused by direct irritation, applied to the mucous membrane of the vagina itself.

When reviewing the causes of these distressing complaints, it is most painful to contemplate the attendant evils consequent upon them. It is but simple justice to the subject to enumerate a few of the many additional causes which so largely affect the life, health, and happiness of woman in all classes of society, and which, consequently, affect more or less directly, the welfare of the entire human family. The mania that exists for precocious education and marriage, causes the years that nature designed for corporeal development to be wasted and perverted in the restraints of dress, the early confinement of school, and especially in the unhealthy excitement of the ball-room. Thus, with the body half-clothed, and the mind unduly excited by pleasure, perverting in midnight revels the hours designed by nature for sleep and rest, the work of destruction is half accomplished.

In consequence of this early strain upon her system, unnecessary effort is required by the delicate votary to retain her situation in school at a later day, thus aggravating the evil. When one excitement is over, another in prospective keeps the mind morbidly sensitive to impression, while the now constant restraint of fashionable dress, absolutely forbidding the exercise indispensable to the attainment and retention of organic health and strength; the exposure to night air; the sudden change of temperature; the complete prostration produced by excessive dancing, must, of necessity, produce their legitimate effect. At last, an early marriage caps the climax of misery, and the unfortunate one, hitherto so utterly regardless of the plain dictates and remonstrances of her delicate nature, becomes an unwilling subject of medical treatment. This is but a truthful picture of the experience of thousands of our young women.

Long before the ability to exercise the functions of the generative organs, they require an education of their peculiar nervous system, composed of what is called the tissue, which is, in common with the female breast and lips, evidently under the control of mental emotions and associations at an early period of life; and, as we shall subsequently see, these emotions, when excessive, lead, long before puberty, to habits which sap the very life of their victims ere nature has self-completed their development.

For Female Weakness and Debility, Whites or Leucorrhœa, Too Profuse Menstruation, Exhaustion, Too Long Continued Periods, for Prolapsus and Bearing Down, or Prolapsus Uteri, we offer the most perfect specific known:

HELMBOLD'S COMPOUND EXTRACT OF BUCHU.

Directions for use, diet, and advice, accompany.

Females in every period of life, from infancy to extreme old age, will find it a remedy to aid nature in the discharge of its functions. Strength is the glory of manhood and womanhood.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU

is more strengthening than any of the preparations of Bark or Iron, infinitely safer, and more pleasant.

HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU,

having received the indorsement of the most prominent physicians in the United States, is now offered to afflicted humanity as a certain cure for the following diseases and symptoms, from whatever cause originating: General Debility, Mental and Physical Depression, Imbecility, Determination of Blood to the Head, Confused Ideas, Hysteria, General Irritability, Restlessness and Sleeplessness at Night, Absence of Muscular Efficiency, Loss of Appetite, Dyspepsia, Emaciation, Low Spirits, Disorganization or Paralysis of the Organs of Generation, Palpitation of the Heart, and, in fact, all the concomitants of a Nervous and Debilitated state of the system. To insure the genuine, cut this out. Ask for HELMBOLD'S. Take no other. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Price $1,25 per bottle, or six bottles for $6.50. Delivered to any address. Describe the symptoms in all communications. Address H. T. HELMBOLD, Drug and Chemical Warehouse, 594 Broadway, N.Y.

None are genuine unless done up in steel-engraved wrapper, with fac simile of my Chemical Warehouse, and signed
