GRAND MASONIC CEREMONY—INSTALLATION OF THE PRINCE OF WALES.

(London Telegraph, April 8.)

One of the grandest and most interesting masonic festivals which have been celebrated in London for many years, took place at Willis' Rooms last night, on the occasion of the union of the Grand Conclave of Masonic Knights Templars of England and the Grand Conclave of High Knights Templars of Ireland, together with the installation of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales as Grand Master of the United Orders.

Great interest was manifested in the event, and the muster of knights was very large, including nearly all the officers of the English order, namely: Most Eminent and Supreme Grand Master Sir Knight Wm. Stuart, Very High and Eminent Deputy Grand Master Sir Knight the Reverend J. Hayshe, M.A., Past Deputy Grand Master Sir Knight Colonel G. A. Vernon, Grand Seneschal Sir Knight Right Hon. Lord Skelmeradale, Grand Prior Sir Knight Right Hon. the Earl of Limerick, Grand Sub Prior Colonel C. Lyne, Grand Prelate Rev. E. Moore, M.A., First Grand Captain C. R. N. Beswicke-Royds, Second Grand Captain Lieutenant-Colonel H. C. Fitzgerald, Grand Chancellor Sir Patrick Colquhoun, Q.C., LL.D., Grand Vice-Chancellor W. Tinkler, Grand Registrar Joseph Lavender, Grand Treasurer C. Goulden, M.A., Grand Chamberlain Lyons Wright, Grand Hospitaller the Rev. P. H. Newnham, Grand Director of Ceremonies J. Lambert Sim, Assistant Grand Director of Ceremonies, J. F. Starkey, Grand Superintendent of Works W. Hyde Pullen, Grand Constable F. W. A. Ramsay M.D., Grand Provost Eliza Holmes, Grand Almoner Rev. C. Dowson, Grand Warden of Regalia G. Lambert, First Grand Expert J. R. Bramble, Second Grand Expert S. Rosanthal, First Grand Standard Bearer G. Jones, Second Grand Standard Bearer R. H. Hutchinson, Third Grand Standard Bearer J. D. Moore, M.D., Fourth Grand Standard Bearer A. C. Mott, First Grand Aide-de-Camp Sir Knight Preston J. Wallis, Second Grand Aide-de-Camp J. Read, First Grand Captain of Lines E. Turner, Second Grand Captain of Lines J. Fletcher, First Grand Herald W. R. Maby, Second Grand Herald J. R. Poulter, Grand Organist Wilhelm Ganz, Grand Sword Bearer A. Horsfall. The Grand Officers of the Irish Conclave are:—His Grace Augustus Frederick Duke of Leinster, M.E. and Supreme Grand Master; Robert W. Shekleton, Deputy Grand Master; George Johnston, M.D., Grand Captain-General; Captain George Huband, Grand Marshal; John Ringland, M.D., Grand Treasurer; Chas. D. Walmisley, Recorder or Sec.; Rev. John J. Macsorley, Grand Prelate; Richd. B. de Burgh, Grand Standard Bearer; Wm. J. O'Donovan, LL.D., Grand Sword Bearer; John A. Baker, Grand Senior A.D.C. Capt. A. Vesey Davoren, Grand Junior A.D.C., Edward Hamilton, M.D., Grand Janitor—many of whom were in attendance. It is understood that only one knight of the Scottish order was present. Not unlikely there will be an endeavour made before long to unite the Scottish order of Knights Templars with the English and Irish, and His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales would then be invited to act as Grand Master of all.

At five o'clock a special Grand Priory of England was opened, after which the Great Prior of England Designate took his seat in the second circle below the dais on the right hand of the Deputy Grand Master, the dais itself being left vacant. The Prince of Wales, who came in the most unostentatious manner, arrived about six o'clock, and was received by the Aides-de-Camp at the entrance. The following officers: the Grand Master Emeritus Stuart, the Past Deputy Grand Master and Sub-Prior of Ireland (R. W. Shekleton), the Deputy Master (the Rev. John Huyshe), the Past Deputy Grand Master (Colonel Vernon), and officers designate, the Great Prior of England, the Seneschal, the Primate, the Arch-Chancellor, the Great Constable, the Great Marshal, the Arch-Registrar, His Royal Highness's Chamberlain having left the Great Priory, adjourned to the Prince's private room to receive his Royal Highness. When the reception was over these officers retired, except the Chamberlain, who remained for the purpose of robing the Prince. Shortly afterwards notification was given to the Aides-de-Camp that the Grand Master Elect was ready. The Aides-de-Camp having announced to the Grand Priory the arrival of the Grand Master Elect, the Prince was conducted by the Great Officers Designate of Convent General, in inverted order, juniors first, to the Grand Priory. Their arrival at the Priory was announced by a great flourish of trumpets, and, the doors having been thrown open, they proceeded under the Arch of Steel towards the dais, the organ playing the National Anthem. At this moment the scene was most striking. The Knights, wearing their mantles and swords, and the insignia of their various offices, stood ranged in order from the doorway to the dais at the farther end of the room, with their swords raised and crossed. The room was hung with scarlet, decorated with innumerable banners, and brilliantly illuminated, the Sepulchre, with the cross, bearing the figure of our Saviour, being placed in the middle of the room. His Royal Highness was received on the dais by the Great Prior of Ireland, the Grand Master Emeritus of England, the Past Deputy Grand Master and Sub-Prior of Ireland, R. W. Shekleton; the Deputy Grand Master, the Rev. John Huyshe; the Deputy Grand Master Emeritus, Colonel Vernon. The Installing Officer on the throne having placed the Grand Master Elect on his right, the Grand Master Emeritus Stuart on his left, the Deputy Grand Master (the Rev. J. Huyshe), next the Prince, the Past Deputy Grand Master and Sub-Prior of Ireland (R. W. Shekleton), next Grand Master Stuart, and the Past Deputy Grand Master (Colonel Vernon), next the Rev. J. Huyshe, the Installing Officer opened the Convent General, and called upon the Arch-Registrar to read the statute of election. The Installing Officer then put the following questions to the Grand Master Elect:

Installing Officer: Are you ready and willing to undertake the supreme government of these Orders in England and Ireland, and the dependencies of the British Crown?

His Royal Highness: I am.

Installing Officer: Will you observe all things that will promote the well-being and dignity thereof?

His Royal Highness: I will.

Installing Officer: Will you protect and uphold the same to the best of your ability?

His Royal Highness: I will.

Installing Officer: You will not acknowledge any superior, co-ordinate, or inferior jurisdiction?

His Royal Highness: I will not.

Installing Officer: You will not permit your prerogative or authority to be infringed?

His Royal Highness: I will not.

Installing Officer: You will uphold the Queen's supremacy?

His Royal Highness: I will.

Installing Officer: You will judge all equally without distinction of rank?

His Royal Highness: I will.

The Primate thereupon offered up the following prayer:

"O Lord, who ruleth the hearts of the greatest and humblest on earth, imbue this Thy servant and our Governor with a portion of Thy Divine grace, to the end that he may rule us aright, and, ever relying on Thy protection, he may glorify Thee in his works. Endow all those committed to his care with such a measure of Thy wisdom that they may render due obedience to him who, under Thy guiding power, has been set in authority over us. This we pray, through Christ our Prophet, Christ our Priest, and Christ our King."

The Grand Master Elect then took the oaths and signed the roll on the Sepulchre, the proper officers attending with the insiguia of office, viz., steel chain, cross of Salem, sword, baton, ring, and book, which the Installing Officer took severally and delivered to the Grand Master at the Sepulchre. This solemn part of the ceremony having been concluded, the Installing Officer conducted His Royal Highness to the Throne, with the words: "I place you on the Throne as Grand Master of the Order in England, Ireland and Wales, and the Dependencies of the English Crown;" and then took his seat on the right. The Primate having pronounced the Benedicite Sacerdotalis "Pax et benedictio Patris omnipotentis Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, in te descendit et tecum maneat as secula seculorum. Amen!"—the Herald made due proclamation to the East, Southwest and Northwest. The Knights in order filed past from both sides, saluting, two at once, and then marched down the centre, to the swelling notes of the organ accompaniment. This respectful salutation having been made, the Arch-Chancellor advanced to the foot of the dais and delivered the inaugural address, after which the Grand Organist played a voluntary. The Grand Master then installed the Great Prior of England, and next appointed his officers, who thereupon were summoned by the Great Marshal to do homage. The Grand Master afterwards appointed Grand Crosses and Commanders, and nominated the Subaltern Officers. Notices of motion for the next Convent General were given, the committee for effecting a uniformity of Ritual was appointed, and the Grand Master then closed the Special Convent General in due form, and retired to his room with the Great Officers only, passing again under the Arch of steel, while the organist played a solemn air. The Great Prior of England then brought the proceedings to a conclusion.

At the banquet which followed the installation, his Royal Highness announced that the Queen, already the patroness of craft Masonry, would be the patroness likewise of their united order.
