The Boy Who Didn't Pass

A sad faced little fellow sits alone in deep disgrace
There's a lump arising in his throat and tears drop down his face;
He wandered from his playmates,for he doesn't want to hear Their shouts of merry laughter since the world has lost its cheer.
He has sipped the cup of sorrow—
he has drained the bitter glass And his heart is fairly breaking—he's the boy who didn't pass.

In the apple tree the robin sings a cheery little song;
But he doesn't seem to hear it—showing plainly something wrong, Comes his faithful little spaniel for a romp and bit of play
And alone he sits in sorrow, bids him sternly go away.
And alone he sits in sorrow with his hair a tangled mass,
And his eyes are red with weeping
—he's the boy who didn't pass.

Oh, you who boast a laughing son and speak of him as bright And you who loves a little girl who comes to you at night
With shining eyes and dancing feet, with honors from the school Turn to that lonely littlt lad who thinks he is a fool.
And take him kindly by the hand,
the dullest of his class;
He is the one who needs most love
—the boy who didn't pass.

Where Patronage Goes

(St. Thomas Times-Journal.)

A gentleman who has considerable business experience in United States and Canada has issued a pamphlet in which he sets out to show how Canadian enterprises may increase their sales in this country and abroad. He attributes the success attained by American manufacturers in disposing of their wares in the Canadian market to well-organized publicity campaigns. This, combined with a policy which studies the requirements of customers and makes every effort to meet their tastes, has resulted in expanding sales ousting articles of domestic manufacture which, it is admitted, are often superior, and putting other foreign competitors out of the running. But there is no reason why domestic concerns should suffer, says the author of this pamphlet, Mr. Victor Soucisse. Let the Canadians adopt similar methods; let full and intelligent use be made of advertising media, and the importer be met on equal terms in this respect, and there can be no doubt about the result, he says. It is no good having meritorious commodities for sale if their merits are not sufficiently made known. The days are past when good wine needed no bush. In the complexity of modern business advertising plays one of the chief roles; it is to the goods which have the largest and best publicity that patronage goes.

The bride entered the church with her mother and her father, assisted by the father of the groom, officated. The bride wore a graceful gown of eggshell chiffon, made on long lines, with mohair hat of the same shade, and carried a sheaf of talisman roses. Miss Gwen Roberts, sister of the bride, was her attendant, in a becoming frock of peach chiffon, with peach mohair hat and bouquet of Johanna roses. The best man was Rev. J. Gordon Patterson, and the ushers were: Rev. Robert Hall and Mr. A. J. Trebilcock Mr. G. D. Atkinson was at the organ, and during the signing of the register, Miss Annie Kingsley sang. A reception was held afterwards at the home of the bride's parents, for the relatives and out-of town friends of the two families. Mrs. Roberts, mother of the bride, received in a gown of deep wine shade, with matching hat. Mrs. MacVicar, mother of the groom, was in black crepe de chine and net, with black hat. Later, the bride and groom left on their wedding trip, and will spend the coming year in Edinburgh Scotland.
