Changes Being Made On Rural Route

The Post Office Department announces a change in plans of Rural Route No. 1 from the Flesherton office that will give better service to the patrons on the route between Maxwell and Feversham. At the present time the carrier has to wait at the Maxwell office for half an hour or so until the mail is sorted and he then proceeds to Feversham and delivers the mail on the route.

The new plans call for the eight subscribers on that route to be placed on Flesherton R. R. No. 1, which will allow the carriers to proceed immediately he has delivered the Maxwell mail at the post office.

Agitation is being made to have the farmers on the road between Flesherton and Eugeneia and Eugenia and Kimberley made a rural route, receiving their mail through the Flesherton post office and to be delivered by the Kimberley mail carrier.

Mr. John Speers had his contract renewed recently for the Kimberley route but the suggested changes were not included in the articles. Negotiations are under way for an agreement to supply the service. At present the farmers on the route have to travel either to Kimberley or Eugenia to secure their mail, which is not fair to them.

Mrs. Robt. Croft of town was successful in winning a lovely set of dishes given by the Osprey & Artemesia Co-operative Co. for the customer guessing the closest to the number of beans in a bottle. Wool Salvaged

There will be little loss to those sheepmen who shipped their wool to the Canadian Co-operative Wool Growers, Ltd., as a result of the fire which completely destroped the Western warehouse a short time ago.Very little of the 3,400,000 pounds of wool in storage at the time was burned, though all the wool was seriously damaged by scorching and smoke, and further damage was caused by water pouring into the building to quench the blaze. To check heating, which immediately followed soaking, the wool was removed to a nearby field and spread out loosely in the sun to dry and this quick action resulted in a salvage of well over three million pounds of wet and damaged wool. The sale of this, added to the insurance carried, officials state, should balance a reasonable market value of the wool at the time of the fire. On the building and business operations for 1930 however, there will be a loss. It is expected that a new warehouse of absolutely fire-proof construction will be erected in time to take care of next season's crop.
