Only Thinking About It

Regarding the statement that the C.P.R. was discussing the matter of doing away with their Woodbridge-Mono Road line and sending its passenger trains by way of Brampton and the old Credit Valley railway, an official of the Company informed the Toronto Globe to the following effect:

"We are only in the discussion stage, and before any definite steps could be taken three townships affected would have to be consulted, and the whole matter receive the approval of the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners."

The townships are interested on account of bonuses given years ago to the old Credit Valley Railway and the Toronto, Grey and Bruce Railway, which are now part of the Canadian Pacific Railway system.

"Nothing' may come of it," the official said. "There are many obstacles in the path at present, and premature publication of any proposals might interfere with our plans," he said.

Small Town Gossip

In talking over various things the other day, two women, born and brought up in a small town, decided that all their life had been greatly enriched by the experience. One of them a mother, said she often looked at her daughters and realized that much had been left out of the experiences of her city-born child that she herself had known, much that she is now turning to account in the city for the city's good. We hear a great deal about small town gossip, but no one mentions the fact that big-town gossip is just as bitter, just as rife. But in the small town, if there is undue interest in other people's affairs, there is also promptness in bearing others' burdens. If a mother breaks her ankle some kindly neighbor comes in and cooks the dinner for the children tumbling home from school, hungry and clamorous. When death visits a house, baskets with a delicious meal go in, and kind hands sweep and dust and tidy up, and these little kindnesses bring with them a sonsoling sense of the continuity of human love. In the realms of self-development the small towns, where people must do many things for themselves, including making their own amusements, has the advantage over larger places where most things are readymade.—Mail-Empire.

The little tots presented most of the program with recitations a dialogue or so, exercises by several groups, which made a variety program. The main event on the program was a cantata "Santa Claus Acquitted." This required considerable time to present and was exceptionally good. Rev. W. J. Scott, pastor of the church, presided. Mr. Jos. McKee, Superintendent of the Sunday School, gave his report and stated that the School was in a satisfactory financial condition. The auditorium of the church was fairly well filled, and about $74 was taken in at the door. The usual supper was given in the basement of the School room.

F. H. W. HICKLING
FLESHERTON, ONTARIO

"How old are you?" inquired the visitor of his host's little son. That is a difficult question," answered the infant prodigy. "The latest personal survey available shows my physiological age to be 12, my moral age 4, my anatomical age 7, and my physiological age 6. I suppose, however, that you refer to my chronological age which is 8. That is so old-fashioned that I seldom think of it any more."
