EXECUTION OF A WOMAN AT MAIDSTONE.

On Thursday Frances Kidder, who was convicted to the murder of Louisa Staples, the daughter of her husband, 13 years of age, was executed in front of the county gaol at Maidstone. The prisoner seemed to have conceived a great dislike to the child, and to have repeatedly threatened its life. She appeared to have taken it out one evening in August last, while she was on a visit to her mother and father at New Romney, saying she was going for a walk, and she returned without the child, which was found drowned in a ditch close to her father's house. The unhappy woman since her conviction, has admitted that she drowned the child, but declared that the act was not premeditated and that she had no intention to destroy the child when she left her husband's house. The wretched woman was lamentably ignorent, and she appeared to be utterly unacquainted with anything like religious notions. Through the instrumentality of the Rev. Mr Frazer, the chaplain of the prison, she had learned to read since she had been in custody, and she was thus enabled to read portions of the Scriptures, and she appeared deeply grateful to the chaplain for the kind manner in which he had behaved to her while she was under his charge. It was necessary to assist the culprit on the scaffold, and after the drop fell she appeared to struggle slightly before life was extinct.

SHOCKING MURDER IN RUSSIA.

A horrible butchery has been committed at Tamboff. It seems that one evening a fortnight ago, a tradesman, called Jemarin, quitted his house on business about five, leaving behind him his mother, his eldest son, aged 11, the cook, and dvornik, or door porter. Mde. Jemarin, the second son, aged 4, a female relation, and a nursemaid, who composed the rest of the family, were all absent, but a carriage was to be sent to fetch them during the course of the evening. At ten M. Jemarin came home and knocked at the door, but no one answered his summons. While he was was waiting in perplexity the coachman and nurse came up and told him that, having tried in vain to get into the house, they had thought it prudent to go in search of the police, several of whom accompanied them. An entrance was effected by the chief lobby, the inner door of which (there are generally two in Russian houses) was found open, and on reaching the first room six dead bodies were discovered lying on the ground—those of the mother, the wife, the eldest boy, the relation, the cook, and the dvornik. The youngest boy lay on the floor, with his head cut open, but breathing. Madame Jemarin, the lady, and the younger boy were still dressed in their furs, which proves that the crime was committed at the very instant of their return. Five bullets, all of the same size, and evidently discharged from a revolver, were extracted from the bodies. In the next room was found an iron ball, tied to a leathern thong, covered with blood. The house is situated in one of the most populous parts of the town, so that one is lost in conjecture how such a wholesale massacre could have been accomplished without awakening alarm among the neighbours or passers-by.

GOLD DISCOVERY IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Herr Mauch, the German traveller, has arrived in Natal. He asserts that goldfields, believed by him to be richer than those of California or Australia, exist in the interior. According to his statements the locality of this auriferous region is precisely identical with the description given by Dr. Livingstone in his first book of travels, and the present discovery may be regarded as being the confirmation of rumours and the justification of convictions that have prevailed from the earliest times. Mr Mauch tells us that he has seen two goldfields—the northern one being of indefinite extent, and lying much nearer the Zambesi than the other. This latter one is situated about 900 miles from Natal in a north-westerly direction, beyond and to the west of the limits of the Transvaal Republic. It is in the country formerly ruled by Sekomo, a runaway chieftain, whose place is now filled by Machin, under the suzerainty of Moselekatse. As the former chief can muster 10,000 warriors and the latter 40,000 it is evident that the chief obstacle in the way of any gold-working movement rests in them. The geological character of the district is represented by metamorphic rocks, with slate, and the other usual indications of auriferous wealth. Vegetation is not luxuriant in the immediate neighbourhood of the goldfield, which Mr Mauch estimates to cover a tract of 20 miles broad and 60 miles long, there are not many natives. When the explorer saw the white reefs of auriferous quartz glistening in the sun, as they cropped out here and there, he was startled by the conception of the wealth which he firmly believes those reefs to contain. Thousands of holes, some ten feet deep, give evidence of old native workings, and bear out Dr. Livingstone's remark about the gold washings carried on in wooden bowls by the Kaffirs in times past.—Natal Mercury, Feb. 10.

An interesting case has just been tried before the military tribunal of Bordeaux. The accused, a young man of 27, had left France at the age of 17 for the United States, where, by his efforts, he had made a rapid fortune, and had at least become a naturalized American citizen. He is now at the head of a large commercial house in Louisiana, but, his father having died in France, he had returned home to settle some family affairs, and was arrested as a deserter, having been, during his absence, drawn in the conscription. As the naturalization as no retro-active effect, the accused is claimed to have been a French citizen at the moment when his military service should have commenced. He was sentenced to six days' imprisonment.

A Lombard paper relates a curious incident that lately occurred in Brescia. A male child was put out immediately to nurse after its birth, with a woman living at some distance from the city. Three months afterwards the parents called to see it. The nurse produced a girl baby and insisted that she was their child. By dint of threats she was, however, obliged to confess that with the hope of earning a double fee she had carried the boy to the foundling hospital and the next day had presented herself at that institution to adopt a child, supposing she would receive the same she left. It turned out that she had received a girl. On inquiry at the hospital it was discovered that at the hour when the child of these distracted parents was left there, another male child was also deposited, and there were no distinguishing marks. The father, reasoning that he might always be tormented with doubts if he left either, concluded to adopt both, and did so.
