SUPRESSION IS THE WISEST.

A lady writer in a United States magazine has been studying Soviet rule in Russia, and publishes her findings. Although written in a very sympathetic strain, she gives us a vision of conditions in Russia that will scarcely be accepted as ideal in this Canada of ours. The social conditions there would be a horror to Western minds. For instance, speaking of marriage, she quotes:

"We can marry at will at 18. We can divorce at will if we have no children. If there are children, we, that is the father and mother, must help to support them. (the state does the rest—Ed.) If there are no children, it is not even necessary to agree upon divorce. If my husband ill-treats me, or I no longer wish to live with him, I can go to the divorce court and divorce him and mail him a letter telling him that he is divorced. If I choose to live with a man in free union, I can, and if we have children, they art legitimate."

And this is the kind of thing those Toronto Reds, who are denied the privilege of holding out-of-doors meetings, would foist upon the law-abiding citizens of this country! Their utterings are a poisonous virus, and we should exercise just as great a horror of their creed as we would of a rattlesnake. We control and destroy venemous and destructive insects, and the authorities who are working towards the destruction of Red influences in Canada should be commended and upheld in their efforts rather than censuring and criticizing them.

AN EPOCHAL BROADCAST.

A radio broadcasting station was recently installed in the Vatican, at Rome, Italy, and Pope Pius XI. will address the world for the first time over this station through the United States and Canadian radio network from station CFRB, Toronto, on Thursday, Feb. 12, at about 10 a.m. eastern standard time. This is the first address given out to the world over the new station, and will no doubt be listened to by many millions of people.

Radio is one of the modern wonders of the world undreamed of only a few short years ago, and it is probably only a forecast of more marvellous things to come.

Some of the great inventions, such as the telephone and automobile, have become agents for the criminally inclined, but so far the chiminal has not found any use for radio. In that respect it is a greater actual boon to humanity than either of the other inventions. It is wholly beneficial, while the others are of questionable value in many directions, enabling the crook in a large percentage of cases to escape justice, temporarily or altogether.

GREAT MINDS, ETC., ETC.

It is peculiar how two people at far distant points will be thinking along the same lines. The Flesherton Advance last week carried an editorial almost identical with the one we wrote on the Workmen's Compensation Board. Like the Arrow, The Advance has operated fifty years without an accident but has to pay the same rate of premium as shops that continually are drawing compensation.—Burks Falls Arrow.

VANDELEUR DEATHS.

Our correspondence from Vandeleur has gone astray this week. It included an announcement of the death of Mr. Samuel Bowes of the Kimberley Valley, and of Mrs. Henry McLoughry, widow of the late Henry McLoughry of Markdale. Both the deaths occurred on Sunday last. Mr. Bowes was 67 years of age. His remains were interred in the Meaford Road cemetery, and those of Mrs. McLoughry at Markdale. Mr. Bowes leaves a widow and five children.

GET SOMEWHAT PEEVED

From time to time the Express is asked to publish reports from various organizations after such reports have been published in the Owen Sound Daily several days ahead of the publication of this paper, and it gets under our skin to be playing second fiddle all the time. If the heads of these organizations would reach their matter at a time when the local papers could be on a par with our outside opposition, we would not mind. In many cases it is only thoughtlessness that causes the trouble as a sure way of killing the local papers is to continue to ignore them and supply Owen Sound with such reading matter days ahead of local distribution. The practice of giving Owen Sound the preference over your own town papers is completely taking the joy out of the lives of the local publishers and may eventually mean a serious step for the community as well.— Meaford Express

Co- Operation

These critical times are causing people to think; agriculture is passing through stressful times; its purchasing power has been reduced to a minimum and consequently many other lines of business suffer.

The United Church in conference last September stated: "Instead of profit as a central feature in the economic system should now be put co-operation and service." The rural clergy of the Catholic diocese of Antigonish, Nova Scotia, at a two-days gathering last October agreed that "only through co-operation could agricultural problems be solved."

Agricultural co-operation consists of two parts: co-operation to sell farm products—and this will possibly one day be carried into the processing of manufacture of farm products, and co-operation in buying supplies together, that is, as consumers. Since the job of stretching the purchasing power of the dollar to the utmost limit is the farmer's greatest need at the moment, co-operating as consumers is being discussed.

The coal miners co-operative society of Canada, called the British Canadian, of Cape Breton, has sold to its members merchandise to the value of 17 million dollars in the last 23 years and created a net surplus just short of two million dollars. The coal miners of that district had returned to them as consumers $1,700,000, but, as holders of share capital only $151,000. As investors of capital they received only one-thirtieth of the profit. As consumers they received twelve-thirteenths. Under competitive systems this really large sum of maney would have gone to make the rich richer and in going would have made the poor poorer.

The British co-operative movement in 1929 had sales in the retail stores aggregating one billion, 85 million, and though it was a year of great depression, the co-operative movement found employment for nearly ten thousand more people than it had on the pay roll the year before. Yet nearly one hundred and thirty million dollars went back to the consumers who were members of the British co-operative movement. They not only buy together, but manufacture co-operatively. They own great farms in many parts of the world, banks, credit societies of one sort or another, ships hotels, restaurants, printing houses, and on and on almost indefinitely. They are reported to be the largest single business in the world.

Co-operative endeavors have grown quite rapidly in Alberta, Manitoba and Saskatchewan. And in these provinces the local co-operative units have organized wholesale societies to serve all co-operative stores within the province that they may be better able to buy to better advantage.

Ontario has some 60 co-operative units, but as yet no co-operative wholesale society has been organized though the need of one is very great.

It is only by mutual self help intelligently practiced, that co-operation can thrive. No co-operative concern can succeed unless the members feel it is theirs and take a personal interest in its success, and unless the management is loyal and efficient. All members need to understand that they are helping to build a society which gives a greater reward to those who toil, a reward not only in money but in greater satisfaction of living.

Dr. Warbasse, probably the greatest and best known writer on Co-operation on the North American continent, says, "A civilization in which a large proportion of the people, who have the good things, are those who do not perform useful work, and a civilization in which most of those who do perfrom the needful service live and die in comparative poverty, is a tottering shell.

Co-operation is the method used for building up, slowly but steadily, a new civilization within the framework of the old; not wrecking the old, but building something to take its place when it shall have fallen into decay.

Of course men are fools to marry—but what else can women marry?

A school teacher asked pupils to tell who the world's smartest man is, and give the reasons. One urchin suggested Thomas Edison "because he invented the phonograph and the radio so people could stay up all night and use his electric light bulbs."

"Hello mother — yes, I'm feeling fine — yes, we won . . . I scored two goals."

It has come to be a habit with Fred to call his mother by Long Distance after every game. For mother is all alone . . . and she worries about him . . . ever since Fred's chum had his leg broken in a game early in the season.

The cost is a mere trifle, for the low night rates are always in effect after the game — they begin at 8.30 p.m. And it makes a pleasant break in mother's quiet life . . . and gives her some news to tell her friends. Long Distance is now quick and dependable. In most cases the connection is established while you hold the line. Evening and night rates are particularly inexpensive. In fact night rates are little more than half of the day rates.

Evening rates on "Anyone" (station-to-station) calls begin at 7 p.m. Night rates begin at 8.30 p.m.
