Pipe Dream Shattered

A lady living not more than three miles south of this village discovered a black fox in the yard a few days ago, and succeeded after some difficulty in chasing it into the barn. Phoning to the next farm she invited some one to come over and help capture it. In the meantime visions of a new fur coat for next winter and a few dollars for household needs flitted through her mind. Two of the neighbors came along, one carrying a long pole with a wire loop at the end to capture sly reynard alive, the other armed with some other appliance. Cautiously entering the barn, they discovered that the fox was no other than Wm. Moore's black Persian cat! And thus was another pipe dream shattered.

Cow testing is very important. Not all cows that give milk are profitable. The only way to make sure of these unprofitable cows is by the systematic use of the milk scales and the Babcock test.

The heavy hare that has been giving sportsmen some enjoyable outings in counties along the Grand river has made its way into Simcoe county and during the winter some fine specimens have been secured by town devotees of the gun. J. S. Ellis got a ten pounder last week and several animals weighing six and eight pounds have been bagged by different hunters of town. The largest hare yet seen in town was brought in by Alex. Freeman. It weighed twenty pounds. Alliston Herald.

A FARMING JOURNAL.

An example which might well be followed in other counties is that of the Norfolk Chamber of Commerce in issuing an annual Agricultural Journal. The third annual issue has just been distributed free of charge to 5,000 farmers in the county. It is an eight-page publication and contains a wealth of information relating to the farming industry. Almost every phase of agriculture as carried on in this county is discussed such as poultry breeding, reforestation, tobacco-raising, fertilizers, fruit and vegetable growing. It also carries several informative articles by O.A.C. authorities. Numerous pictures of local interest are used to brighten the pages. The local agricultural representative, F. C. Patterson, who is also secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, has been largely responsible for the success of this valuable publication.
