The fallacy of holding eggs for a rise in the market has been frequently shown, as these eggs invariably grade seconds. Farmers are urged to market their eggs in the very best of condition, which naturally is as soon after laying as possible, so that they will get the benefit of official grading.

St. John's Services

Special services marked the commemoration of the Easter event in St. John's United Church on Sunday last At the morning service a number of the young people were received into the Church by profession of their faith in Christ after which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper was observed. The minister preached on "The Power of the Endless Life." Special Easter anthems were presented by the choir under the leadership of Mrs. Blackburn.

At the evening service the program was varied by the presentation of the Easter pageant "The Challenge of the Cross", by seven members of the Young People's Class, under the leadership of Mrs. E. C. Murray, and assisted by the choir. Easter anthems and the singing of the great familiar Easter hymns, together with the most impressive lessons of the Pageant, left an impression of services of rare beauty and effectiveness.

Large congregations were in attendance at both services in spite of the bad condition of the roads and the prevalence of illnesses.

Among other intimations made by the Minister was one announcing the coming on Sunday, April 19th of Rev. C. D. Donald of India. Mr. Donald, having spent 14 years in India, is keenly alive to the problems facing Church and Empire in that land and will speak to us concerning that situation both morning and evening. In the evening he will give an illustrated lecture, using the lantern. No one should miss hearing him.

Fighting Rural Fires

For several years a determined fight against rural fires has been carried on by the Ontario fire marshall, E. P. Heaton, and his assistants. The barn losses in late summer and fall he blames largely on spontaneous combustion, the result of storing green and damp hay in the mows .For general protection the fire marshall recommends more care in the handling and storing of gasoline. This, he would place at a safe distance from inflammable material and would store in red tins, so it could not be mistaken for anything less. Many rural fires he blames on poorly constructed chimneys. These should be built right to the ground floor, for the masonry is liable to crack and allow explosive gasses to leak out. Long pipes leading to the chimney are condemned, and also the careless leading of these pipes through partitions. He would place properly insulated sleeves in partitions. He urges adoption of community fire-fighting apparatus or arrangements with the nearest town or village so that the apparatus would be at the call of farmers. For this work he recommends a light truck, equipped with chemical apparatus and several small extinguishers. Several organizations have already been formed where a score or more farmers have joined in purchasing fire-fighting equipment and transportation. The truck is stored at a strategic place and is summoned by telephone.
