EDITORIAL NOTES

The political parties in Ontario and Quebec seem to go to extremes in selecting their parliamentary representatives.

* * *

A student of educational tendencies says it would be interesting to learn how many university graduates in this province are now selling cars and bonds for a living, and finding it very hard sledding. Our law-makers have been giving steady encouragement, at much expense to the taxpayer, to all and sundry to enter colleges and get equipment that apparently unfits too many of them for the hard work of every day productive life in town and country. A well known author recently put it: "We are turning out too many hard-boiled, hard headed (?) dumbbells in our colleges."

* * *

Automobile fatalities combine to pile up. It is apparent that men and women are allowed licenses to control cars, and run them at great speed, who have little or no regard for their own lives or the lives of others. And the worst of it is the careful autoist is the victim, while the lawless careerer over the highway manages to escape with little or no injury.

* * *

The United States has reduced its national debt one third in ten years from its peak of twenty-six billion dollars. There was method in the policy of our neighbors in keeping out of the great war, and its enormous expenditure until the eleventh hour, and thereby laying numerous nest eggs for profit when the conflict ended.

Village Much Admired

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hewson motored to Port Huron with their son on Sunday of last week and report a very interesting and enjoyable trip. The party left Duntroon Sunday evening at 6.30 and arrived back home again shortly after midnight. The return trip by the Blue Water Highway was the most beautiful of the two routes. One pleasant memory will be of the little town of Fesherton with its cobbestoned homes and its gas station with beautiful flowers in boxes and baskets everywhere. It looks like an English village had been lifted from its native soil and planted in this little spot in the Blue Mountain of old Ontario.—Collingwood Enterprise.

EPITAPH

Here lies the man who saved his all
For days when rain and snow would fall;
He knew no pleasure, shared no game
And died before the blizzard came.

A man in Toronto got two years for bigamy some time ago, and this week seven years for a similar offence. They ought to put a ring in his nose so the ladies would know he was married.

CUTS

In a recent article on the skin, we stated that the normal healthy skin has several important functions, one of which is that it acts as a barrier to keep out disease germs.

Just as soon as the skin is broken, the barrier is down and those germs which cause infections have an opportunity to gain entrance to the parts under the skin, and to start the serious troubles for which they are responsible.

The break in the skin need not be extensive; the slightest scratch is sufficient. It is not the cut or the scratch which is dangerous, it is the infection which may follow when the cut or scratch is neglected. By infection we mean inflammation and swelling which generally go on to the formation of pus, and which are the result of the action of the germs upon the tissues attacked.

The germs which cause infection are widely spread. Years ago, very few operations were performed. This was not because the surgeons lacked the necessary skill, but because when they operated, the wounds became infected. It was not until the discovery was made that germs causd the infection, that practical means were devised of keeping the germs out of the wounds with the result that modern surgery was made possible.

Wound infections do not occur in hospitals to-day because of the methods used to prevent germs from entering the wounds. Before the surgeon cuts the skin, he prepares the surface in such a way as to destroy any germs which might be on the skin; he wears the sterilized gloves for the operation, and everything which he uses has been sterilized.

The simplest cut or scratch should be properly treated without delay. In this way it is possible to prevent the serious and sometimes fatal results that come about because of the neglect of something which at the time of its occurrence appeared too trival to bother about.

Some persons always want to stick their fingers into things. If they themselves or some other person have a cut or scratch, thy want to get their fingers into it. Fingers, unless they have been given a very thorough wash-scrubbing with soap and water, are almost certain to be soiled and to carry the germs of infection. They should be kept away from cuts.

When the skin is broken, it should be thoroughly cleaned, and for this we should rely chiefly upon soap and water. After this surface is covered with a sterile dressing to keep the area clean.

The treatment of wounds which are at all serious should be left to the doctor. Swelling or pain is the first symptoms of infection, and if either of these occurs, there should be no delay in calling the doctor; the condition then requires active treatment.

Neglect leads to infection and infction is serious. Prompt care of all breaks in the skin, no matter how small they are, prevents infection. It is much better to give care promptly than it is to delay and then to suffer as a result of the neglect.

HOGS YIELD A PROFIT

An Essex County farmer is making a great financial success of hog raising at prevailing prices. After selling a shipment of hogs for $2700 he immediately purchased 80 small pigs and 3500 bushels of mixed grains to be used as pork producer, and is at it again If one farmer can make a success of this phase of agriculture there seems to be no reason why more cannot do likewise. One farmer in Western Ontario kept exact records last fall of every pound of wheat fed his hogs and weighed them to observe gains. At the time of sale his figures showed that every bushel of wheat fed netted him one dollar and fifty cents. The opinion is advanced that even with wheat at 35 cents a bushel, if pork remains at $8 per cwt., the farmer will be able to secure one dollar a bushel for his wheat feeding it.

There was also the darkey quintette announced as from Ohio, but ——! A short play was given by five of our own young folks and then several "grab boxes" were sold for 25 cents and lunch was served.

On Friday evening a number of friends and neighbors held a shower for Mr. and Mrs. Ott Lee (nee Emma Moore) at the home of the bride's uncle, Chas. Moore.

Put This in The Paper

'Please put this in your paper.' This was the message on an envelope which was left at the office. It came from a farmer a few miles out of the city, and it is good enough to put in any paper.

"I am sitting at the kitchen table tonight writing this. My boots are in the oven getting dried out because I have been wading through six inches of water in the hayfield. It has been so wet lately that I have had more time for reading your paper and I am beginning to think a man who works for a living is a fool. I see where one company that had a capital of $2500 was bought up and a million paid for it. The stock on my farm is worth $2500 but I have no chance to make a million out of them, so I'm in the wrong business. Another day I mind reading where a man put up $190,000 and sold out for a million. On Saturday I was at the Stratford market and managed to come home with $7 in my pocket and I got the paper too, and found out that some Mr. Sweezey had handed a million to the politicians. I used to do a little stumping myself around electioin times but no person ever gave me a million. If they had I'd have quit or gone on just as the man with the million said. And I see where a senator is supposed to have made almost two million, and all this money centred around some power plant that hasn't yet turned a wheel. Wait 'till I get my boots out of the over—they're starting to smoke and not being a millionaire, I haven't got another pair. Sometimes us folks in the country are called hayseeds and sodbusters, and I guess that's about what we are. I'll be hanged if I can see how a farmer can make three or four millions of dollars and do it before he starts to work. We're slow all right. We never get paid for anything until we deliver the goods. Perhaps I could organize my farm into a corporation or syndicate or something like that and sell stock for a million dollars. If it stops raining I may try it." — Stratford Beacon-Herald.
