BEWARE MORE TAXATION

When a manufacturing concern, or private business of any kind, finds itself in a position where it is not paying expenses, and is drifting towards bankruptcy, the management casts about for ways and means of reducing expenses and balance the outlay. Most people would consider this the only wise thing to do. However, we have known cases where a father set a son up in business. The son proved a spendthrift and there were continual demands upon the father to supply more funds, until the parent found it impossible to supply more, even to save the son from bankruptcy. Then came the crash. Of the two situations mentioned above, which erhibits the greater wisdom?

For the past thirteen years our governments, Dominion and Provincial, have been playing the part of the young man who profited by the benevolence of a loving parent and who blindly squandered the parental funds, without taking heed for the morrow Time and time again have they unlocked the public chest and rifled it of its contents, then demanded that the public refill the chest through some new means of taxation. How long will it be before the end arrives? And when it does arrive, what will happen? Why should our governing bodies not take stock of their resources and cease squandering the principal which has thus far been placed under their supervision, and "cut their garment to fit the cloth"—in other words, dispense with some of the recently formed departments, reduce the ridiculous fifty and seventy five thousand dollar salaries, and in many other ways which the various governments can discover if they are serious in their endeavors to remedy the financial situation? The people hear that certain small salaries have been reduced about ten per cent., but they would like to see a real reduction in salaries of the highly paid officials, who have as much right to seriously feel the pinch as their subordinates who only receives a salary of one or two thousand dollars a year. Let our government get "down to brass tacks" before the young men now constituting our governmental membership have squandered the whole patrimony of the old people who supply the funds. There are many many ways in which saving can be effected and the budget balanced without following the line of least resistance and demanding more money.

Our various governments have for the past decade been busily engaged devising ways and means of spending more money. They should spend the next twenty-five years trying to lessen the burden. When a department was found to more than pay its way by the funds collected, it straightway proceeded to discover new methods of spending the extra money. In this respect our thoughts go back to the many thousand dollars expended at Eugenia in the pheasant raising experiments, later abandoned. The Department of Game and Fisheries had the money collected through licenses, etc., and of course that money had to be spent, illy nilly. But this was only one incident in a long list that should now be reconsidered.

Roads Blocked Tuesday

Last week we enjoyed regular spring-like weather and by Saturday most of the snow had disappeared. Many farmers tapped the maple trees and some syrup was made, but these operations received a rude set back on Sunday when high winds blew and snow descended. All day Monday a regular blizzard blew and piled the snow in huge drifts on the streets and on the roads, making motor travel very difficult. Quite a number of cars became stranded in the heavy drifts, but with the aid of a shovel and strong arm work were liberated and the road kept open. Mr. Walter Akitt, the syrup king of Grey County, had intended to commence tapping, but the storm delayed operations for the time being.

Tuesday the roads were blocked and the mails from Kimberley and Feversham failed to make an appearance, owing to the heavy roads, but in the afternoon the roads were opened for traffic.

IN MEMORIAM

In sad and loving memory of our dear mother, Elizabeth Milne, who departed this life, March 9th, 1931.

The unseen chords of Memory's harp
Are softly touched to-day;
Thoughts of you come crowding fast
And tears we cannot stay.

She was true and very patient
Through those years she struggled on,
And her dear hands now resting,
Made a home that now is gone.

God knew that she was suffering
And the hills were hard to climb,
So he closed her weary eyelids
And whispered, "peace be thine."
