Mexico is short of funds so it can send only a few men to the Olympic games. Now that the matter has been so plainly stated, we have no hesitation in admitting that for the same reason we will not be in attendance.

Income tax payments during March in United States were $141,000,000 less than the same period last year. It becomes increasingly hard to take more money from people who have less.

New Budget Increases Taxation on All Sides

The big news in the House this week was the budget. But the big news with me was the "flu." I have often heard people speak lightly of this disease, but I never shall again. It is a real disease to be respected like small-pox or scarlet fever. It doesn't bear fooling with. I came out in the middle of an attack of it to hear the budget, that's how I know. Now all my strength is gone. I want to sit in the sun—not sit in the sun and think—just sit.

The Rt. Hon. Edgar N. Rhodes, Minister of Finance, presented the budget in an admirable speech. Beginning in a rather low voice which could not be distinctly heard from where I sit, he, in a few minutes, used slightly more volume and could through the remainder of his well organized and highly technical speech be heard clearly throughout the Chamber.

A very welcome feature of Mr. Rhodes speech was its complete freedom from even a suspicion of party rancour. His general manner and temper were pleasing, and as is usual, it was delivered to a crowded and attentive House. The first speech in reply will be made on Monday by the Hon. J. L. Ralston, financial critic of the Liberal party.

Every budget seems to have a nickname and this one is the 'Axe and Tax budget. Faced with an increase in the debt of $119 million the finance minister found it necessary to evolve a double-edged policy of drastic increases in taxation and unusual slashes in expenditure. It is estimated that the new taxes will increase the revenue of the Dominion by $55,000,000. The sales, excise and nuisance taxes have all been increased, or in a few cases, restored. The corporation tax is increased from 10% to 11%. On personal incomes the $3,000 exemption is reduced to 2,400 and the $1,500 exemption to $1,200; The 20% reduction which up until now was allowed each income tax payer is discontinued. In addition 5% supertax is charged on personal and corporate tax payers with a net income in excess of $5,000. These changes will apply to the 1931 income.

The sales tax is increased from 4% to 6% and a number of articles which were exempt from the sales tax are now included in it. The sales tax became effective the day after the budget came down. The excise tax and tax on imports is increased by 2%. On cheques and money order over $5.00 and on all promissory notes and bills of exchange, etc., the rate is increased from 2c to 3c on amounts up to $100, and 6c over $100. A tax of 10% on railway sleeping car berths and of 10c on chair car tickets has been restored. And there will now be a tax of 5c per message on telegrams, cables, radio messages and long-distance tlephone calls costing over 15c; these taxes to go into force on May 2nd.

On account of the near approach of the Imperial Economic Conference, the tariff was left pratically unchanged.

The brunt of the higher rates in income tax falls on those who have an income between $4,000 and $20,000 and not on incomes over $20,000. The percentage increases on an income of $4,000 is one hundred and on an income of $100,000 only thirty two. It seems ridiculous that the very high incomes should not bear their fair share of the burden, though citizens generally will be thankful for the increase. On a $100,000 income the tax has been $19,064; by the budget it has been increased to $25,248; an increase of over $6,000. But in Great Britain the same income would bear a tax of $44,837. Unless we very soon swing into better times the income tax will be very materially increased, particularly on the higher incomes.

As it is most of the new taxes will be passed on down to the consumer and the people who are least able to pay will be asked to bear the increase. One of the Ottawa papers went to some trouble to find what the merchants of Ottawa thought about the budget, who they thought would finally pay the tax and the almost unanimous opinion was that it would be paid by the consumer. Income tax cannot be passed on down and is therefore a much needed form of taxation.

Robert Gardiner, the leader of the Farm Group in the House, moved an amendment which would remove all exemptions on the 10% cut in salaries. There is strong opposition in the House to the exemptions from the cut. By the bill as it now stands, Lieutenant Governors, Judges, soldiers, sailors and Royal Canadian Mounted Police are exempt. The Prime Minister, the Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, would not accept the amendment.

Sir Josiah Stamp addressed the members of the House of Commons and Senators at lunch yesterday. I was too ill to attend, but a number of my colleagues have said that he made the most refreshing speech they have heard in a long while. I heard only one complaint of it and that, that it was too short.

PRACTICAL HINTS

It is a matter of general knowledge that the number of deaths from cancer continues to increase year by year. To a considerable extent, this is due to the fact that the average expectancy of life has been considerably increased, with the result that a larger percentage of the population now reach the age when cancer most commonly occurs.

The exact cause of cancer is still unknown. What has been observed is that cancer does develop in tissues which have been subjected to a chronic irritation. Cancer does not, for example, begin in a normal skin but in growths of the skin or in areas which are subjected to chronic irritation.

Cancer begins as a local disease, and the control of cancer depends upon its recognition while it is still a local disease, at which stage it can be treated successfully. It is because the early symptoms of cancer are neglected or not recognized that the disease is allowed to progress, before treatment is sought, to the stage when it has become generalized.

Cancer of the breast begins as a local disease. Rarely does it cause pain at the beginning, and because it does not make itself felt, the condition is thought to be of no importance. A painless lump or tumor of the breast is more likely to be cancer than is the one which is tender or painful. There should be no delay in securing treatment at the first sign of a lump or tumor of the breast.

In the mouth, cancer is associated with the chronic irritation set up by broken teeth, badly fitting dental plates, and the use of tobacco. Any white patches in the mouth, any ulcers which do not heal promptly, or overgrowth of tissue should be regarded with suspicion.

Cancer of the uterus begins at the cervix, or lower end of the organ. Irritation follows upon unrepaired tears which occur doing childbirth. Cancer of the uterus is to be suspected in cases where there is irregular bleeding or unusual discharge. Bleeding after the menopause is particularly suggestive.

Blood in the urine suggests disease of the bladder. Cancer of the stomach is preceded by what the patient describes as indigestion, which indicates the importance of having the cause of indigestion properly ascertained, in all cases, and not to regard it as the inevitable result of indiscretions in eating or drinking.

These points are brought to your attention because of their practical value. It is by giving prompt attention to them that treatment may be secured at an early stage of the disease when it is possible, in a large percentage of cases, to effect a cure. The symptoms mentioned do not always mean cancer—far from it, but attention to them is always necessary in case cancer is the cause.

Favor Hulless Oats

Farmers in Haldimand County are quite enthusiastic over the new Liberty Hulless Oat, a variety originated at the Central Experimental Farm at Ottawa some time ago. As a result of selection and careful cleaning they are now able to produce a crop which in total weight of real feed per acre exceeds Banner and is particularly recommended for young live stock and poultry. On the farms of A. E. Hoover of Selkirk and A. Mehlenbacher of Cayuga yields of over 40 measured bushels per acre have been obtained and a measured bushel of hulless weighs close to 50 pounds compared to around 30 for ordinary variety. While there seems to be distinct possibilities in the hulless oat as a food for human consumption so far growers are satisfied to cater to poultry, hogs, and calves. For this sort of stock the new oat seems to be greatly superior to the ordinary kind as there are no wasteful and sometimes dangerous hulls. Prof. A. W. Mason of O.A.C., reports an average yield at Guelph of 54.9 bushels of 34 pounds each of Liberty Hulless and 68.3 bushels of Banner per acre during the past five years. Banner during the same period averaged almost 30 per cent. hull, which according to authorities is not worth more than straw in feeding value. Deducting this hull and figuring on a weight basis, Liberty Hulless has averaged 1,867 pounds per acre at Guelph compared with 1,642 for Banner. Liberty Hulless is slightly shorter in the straw than Banner and matures about a week earlier.

BARLEY FOR HORSES

Barley can be economically used for feeding horses in grain mixtures up to 25 per cent. It gives best results with horses at work and the inclusion of bran or a feed of alfalfa and timothy hay, will prevent any of the undesirable results attributed to this grain.

When well boiled, with the unabsorbed liquid taken up with bran, with the addition of a cup or so of molasses and a pinch of common salt, or a tablespoon of Glaubers Salts, barley forms one of the best conditioning feeds for a horse, fed two or three nights weekly, or even each night for a period.

No product in the world has as great a turnover as chewing gum.
