YOU MAY RIDE WITHOUT A PERMIT

That a word once spoken can never be recalled is again shown when the Collingwood Bulletin commented on the statement of the Chesley Enterprise that anyone riding in a car, the operator of which has not a permit, is liable to a fine. Since this alleged new ruling first was brought to light at Hanover, The Post immediately reported the actual ruling and the Chesley paper gentlemanly admitted its previous information was in error, but unfortunately, quite a number of papers copied the original story but not the correction. Let us repeat: The traffic officer or the Hanover officer will not "pinch" you or put you in jail if you drive with one who has not a driver's permit. You are, however, liable to a fine if you hire an unlicensed driver to operate your car or truck That's an entirely different proposition and one which may never affect ninety-nine per cent. of the motorists. And, furthermore, our exchange's remark that "To make trouble for the public would seem to be the joy of some, clothed with a little authority," is certainly not descriptive of the Hanover police officer.

A stranger in an automobile hailed a Flesherton girl a few nights ago and asked her if she would like to go for a ride.

The shortest man in the word is dead, and he could walk through an opening two feet high. The world needed men like him to lead the search for the hiding place of prosperity.

Scientists in Germany sent three balloons up 65,000 feet and in them were recording instruments. We wait to hear if anything was recorded concerning the return of prosperity.

A perfectly noiseless engine for motor cars has been designed, and with it perishes the last hope of survival for the few remaining pedestrians.

Law in Saskatchewan says wives must go with husbands when a homestead is being picked out. We know there are many husbands today who wish their wives had been along when they were picking out what they thought were good investments.

BILL OF LANDING PROTECTS FARMERS

Excellent progress has been made in applying bill of lading regulations to truck movement of live stock, states Garnet Duncan of the Ontario Marketing Board staff.

"Farmers appreciate the protection offered them by this system against irregularities practised by some truckers," continued Mr. Duncan "and most reliable truckers support the system as it saves time and protects them from unfair competition. Weekly records show the use of bills of lading is increasing steadily."

Chas. Phillips Dies

Charles Phillips, an old boy of this vicinity, died suddenly at his home in Toronto on Thursday evening of last week, death being attributed to heart failure. He was in his 56th year and had been on the police force in Toronto for 32 years. For the past several years he was an attendant on the police ambulance from the Claremont St. station, but previous to this he had been a patrol sergeant in Cowan Ave. and Ossington stations

Charles was on his holidays and visited in Flesherton last week, apparently in good health, taking part in the Orange celebration at Singhampton, where he played the bagpipes, at which he was a pastmaster. He returned to his home on Wednesday and Thursday evening he collapsed on his lawn from a heart attack. The same ambulance he road on while at duty answered the call, but arrived shorty after he had expired.
