Mrs. D. S. Munro Dies

Mrs. F. H. W. Hickling received this week notification of the death of a life-long friend and much respected native of Flesherton, daughter of the late William Wright, a pioneer merchant of this village, and wife of Mr. Donald S. Munro, in the latter quarter of last century principal of Flesherton public school. Deceased will be remembered by old residents as Annie Wright, a bright, vivacious girl, kind hearted and ready at all times to aid in neighborhood activities. She began her wedded life in Flesherton, and here, as well as in her after years, proved a real helpmeet. From Flesherton she went with her husband and young family to Dungannon, and from there, after a period as school principal, settled in Detroit, where Mr. Munro took up a mercantile career, never overlooking his musical proclivities, which were willingly turned to account for the enjoyment of other, while the couple lived here.

Deceased is mourned by her husband, a grown-up fauily and two sisters, "Mel" (Mrs. Currie) and Lena. In recurring holiday time the happy family have repeatedly visited and enjoyed old scenes around Flesherton and in the Kimberley valley and have thus revived early friendships and made new associations.

We are assured that to the bereaved husband and family will be extended sincere condolence from a wide circle in the old home land.

SAVING BABIES

What is a baby's live worth? We will not attempt to assess what is beyond our ability to value. Everyone agrees that every child should be given a fair chance. No one questions the right of the baby to protection from disease. Obviously it is of advantage to the infants and the nation that they have a proper start in life, so that they may grow up into strong and healthy adults.

The past few years have seen great progress made in the controll of preventable diseases. A particularly notable achievement has been the saving of infant lives. There are in this country thousands of children alive and well who would have died as babies if conditions had not changed for the better.

The decrease in the number of infant deaths which has been recorded of late years, is satisfactory evidence that the efforts which have been made are bearing fruit. It also indicates that the work done has been along the right lines.

Mothers of today know more about the proper care of infants than ever before, and so their babies receive more intelligent attention. No matter how much we admire mother love and appreciate the willingness of mothers to sacrifice themselves for their children, we should recognize the fact that affection and good intentions do not take the place of knowledge.

The fact that fewer babies die and that the death rate among pre-school children has been definitely lowered is the answer to those who scoff at what they call "new-fangled ideas." Although we may respect our grandparents, we realize that they were not always wise in their care of babies. In those days, many chidren died because their parents were ignorant facts which today are common knowledge to intelligent parents.

In the midst of trying conditions we have before us a challenge to continue and increase our efforts to save babies. We have gone far, but we can go much farther. Babies still die whose lives could be saved, and those lives would be saved if their parents were better informed regarding infant care.

Progress is gratifying, but it should satisfy us; rather it should serve as spur to drive us on to added efforts toward the preservation of more and more lives. Saving babies is the result of the action of many forces, but the most potent force is the care given the child by a well-informed mother.

A NEW "RACKET"

There is a new racket. It consists of a man poorly dressed, poverty and want written all over him, going into a restaurant and begging a meal. Usually he get it. The meal finished, the tramp pulls out his pocket handkerchief, and out flops a ten-dollar bill on the floor. The restaurant proprietor, peeved that he has been taken in, demands payment for the meal, grabs the bill, takes the price of the meal out of it, and hands the tramp the change. The bill is counterfeit, and when presented at the bank the restauranteur finds out he has been mulcted. What can he do?

We saw the story in one of our exchanges, and according to the news report the restaurant man was told by the banker that he could do nothing, because the swindler "had not actually passed the bill to the proprietor." We doubt this legal advice, as we have the impression the man would suffer quite a severe penalty for having counterfeit money on his person. Anyway, it is a good "racket." —Durham Chronicle.

We are a day late in publishing this week owing to the holiday.

Hanover town council may build sewers to give work to unemployed.

Mr. Wm. Laidlaw, Durham Police Magistrate, died on Tuesday morning at the age of 77 years.

Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Kennedy and family and Mr. and Mrs. W. I. Henry spent the week end at Dungannon.

Mrs. Fred Stuart and two children Murray and Bob, are visiting the former's father, Mr. Peter Meicklejohn, at Campbellford, who is ill.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold McLean of Akron, Ohio, are this week visiting relatives in this district. Harold's friends were very pleased to see him again.

The ground was covered with snow Wednesday afternoon when a hurricane blew for a couple of hours, filling the air with snow. We believe there was close to an inch and a half of snow fell.

The woods in this district were overrun with hunters on Thanksgiving Day, both from town and distant points. Quite a number of partridge are reported to have been captured, together with the myriad of rabbits. Two shooting matches were also carded for that day and also attracted a number of sports.

Soy Beans On Display

We have on display at The Advance office a stock of soy beans grown by Mr. Geo. Hutchinson of Kimberley. It is three feet in height and has 101 bean pods on the stock. Soy beans are proving quite popular with the farmer and more acres are being planted each year. The soy bean is an excellent conditioner for stock when ground into meal and is being more widely used by stock raisers.

One Piglet 90c

The price of pork has fallen to a new low level and last week we were told that the price of young pigs was going real low. Mr. Sam Batchelor of Proton sold a number of young pigs to Mr. John Dow of the O. D. R. for 90c each. Only a few years ago pigs at the same age brought nearly five dollars each. Truly a great drop in the earning power of the farm; a greater drop than in almost any other line of business.

A large crowd attended the sale of W. H. Patterson on his farm on the town line, two miles north of Priceville, on Saturday last. Cows brought from $29 to $50 and some yearlings brought $12.50 each. A binder brought $25, seed drill $12, cultivator $14.50, all in real good condition. Mr. Patterson sold the 150 acre farm to Mr. Wm. Campbell for $3300 and is moving to Ceylon.
