SWORD AND PLOW.

FROM THE GERMAN OF WOLFGANG MULLER.

There once was a Count, so I've heard it said—
Who felt that his end drew near;
And he called his sons before his bed
To part them his goods and gear.

He called for his plow he called for his sword,
That gallant, good and brave;
They brought him both at their father's word,
And thus he his blessings gave:

"My first-born son, my pride and might;
Do thou my sword retain;
My castle on the lordly height,
And all my broad domain.

"On thee, my well loved younger boy,
My plow I here bestow,
A peaceful life shalt thou enjoy,
In the quiet vale below.'

Contented sank the sire to rest,
Now all was given away;
The sons held true his last behest,
E'en on their dying day.

"Now tell us what came of the steel of flame,
Of the castle and its knight!
And tell us what came of the vassal tame,
And the humble peasant wight?"

O ask not of me what the end may be!
Ask of the country round!
The castle is dust, the sword is rust,
The height is but desert ground.

But the vale spreads wide in the golden pride
Of the autumn sunlight now;
It teems and it ripens far and wide,
And the honor abides with the plow.

Feminine Pugilists in Glasgow.

The great "woman movement" is making rapid progress everywhere, but especially in Scotland. The Glasgow ladies appear to be qualifying themselves for the prize-ring, and, stung to indignation by the wrongs of their sex, to be acquiring proficiency in the noble art of self-defence. An interesting fight, according to a Glasgow paper, took place lately between two young women in a field on the south bank of the Clyde, near Rutherglen Bridge. The encounter arose out of a difference, and it was resolved to settle the dispute by strength of arm. After Church-service, the young ladies, accompanied by their respective backers and supporters, strolled pleasantly along the river-side until they reached Strawfield Toll, where, having selected a suitable piece of ground in a field, they lost no time in putting themselves in fighting trim. With the view of preventing what is vulgarly called "a rugging match," each of the fair disputants had her hair closely cropped. Seconds and a referee being chosen, the combat commenced, and was continued with an admirable display of science on both sides for nearly half an hour; when, unfortunately, before it could be decided which was 'the better woman,' two policemen made their appearance, and, in the present unsatisfactory state of the law, it was deemed advisable to effect a retreat. The principals, therefore, accompanied by their friends and a body of spectators, numbering in all about 200 persons, returned to the city, having spent a most enjoyable afternoon.

A Typographical Muddle.—That was a fearful mess in which a paper involved two of its advertisements. The foreman, somehow or other, in placing the type in the form, got an obituary notice mixed up with a menagerie advertisement, so the following appalling paragraph met the eye of the reader: "Died—On the 12th inst., William H. hyena and the baby elephant, McManus, at the age of six comic mules, whose loss is our gain. Prof. Johnsons, who enters the den of lions, afflictions sore long time places his head in the mouth of the ferocious physicians were in vain and the performing monkeys will join him on the other shore with the gun which comes from the deserts of Africa, where the funeral takes place at 4 o'clock, and the friends of the family are invited. Admission 25 cents, children to proceed to Blackwood Cemetry. Peanuts for sale on the grounds. Gone, but not forgotten."

Vicissitudes of Bonapartism.—A correspondent calls attention to the vicissitudes which the ashes of the Bonapartes have undergone. The dust of the first Napoleon rests in the Invalides. Josephene is buried at Malmaison, and the King of Rome at Schoubrunn. Joseph, Lucien, Charles and Jerome, the brothers of the Emperor, lie in different parts of Europe. Charles Marie Napoleon, of Corsica, the father of the whole family, and Napoleon Charles, the eldest son of Hortense and Louis, are buried at St. Leu. Napoleon Louis, the elder brother of the late Emperor, is also buried at St. Leu. The remains of the late Emperor himself are deposited at Chiselhurst. The changing scenes of their lives are in keeping with the fate which seems to follow them after death.—Ham. Times.

—A boy at Virlin, Ill., has brought an action for false imprisonment against his teacher for keeping him in after school hours.

An Uninflammable Starch.

From the scion of royalty to the seamstress or the ballet-girl, more cases of sudden and violent death have been due to the combustion of wearing apparel than to any other cause. Now it is the Archduchess Mathilde of Austria—new the accomplished wife of the poet Longfellow—who falls a victim to her dress catching fire; far oftener, however, it is the poor danseuse or cantatrice before the footlights, or the still poorer heroine of the "Song of the Shirt." At the International Exhibition at South Kensington there was exhibited a starch, says the Lancet, which ought to remove all such calamities in future from the category of accident to that of design. Improving on the old and very partially adopted tungstate of soda, Mr. Donald Nicoll has produced a preparation which renders the finest cambrics and muslins, the materials of window-blinds, mosquito-curtains—the finer fabrics of every kind, in shorts—not only uninflammable, but well-nigh incombustible. Henceforth we are entitled to expect that the verdict, hitherto so frequent at coroners' inquests, "Burnt to death by her clothes accidentally taking fire," will reach its minimum; and that the "curse of Prometheus," will, in great measure, be neutralized by this latest addition to the armory of preventive medicine.

Election Protests.—The policy of corruption Sir John saw fit to continue for the purpose of security a majority in Ontario at the last election is likely to be fruitful of protests when the house meets. It appears that Schuyler Shibley's seat is to be protested, although his majority was 646 over his opponent, Mr. Lapum; and, according to the Tories, Walter Ross goes out certain. Indeed, a large number of the seats won by Reformers are threatened; but we cannot believe the gentlemen of the "Secret Service Fund" will be so rash as to make their conduct subject to the scrutiny of a parliamentary committee. From a party point of view we can only say, "Lay on Macduff."
