The Sunday school social evening on Friday last was pronounced one of the best yet held. There was a large attendance and the splendid program was thoroughly enjoyed. Following a neat address of welcome presented by Victor Osborne, a varied program was given, consisting of community singing, instrumental music, duets, quartettes, quintette, recitations, readings, dialogues and a humorous play. We will not single out names because all who helped did their parts well. A generous collection was received which places the school in good financial standing. A tasty lunch was served and "God be with you till we meet again," brought the night's enjoyment to a close.

ACCUMULATING FRIENDS

It was recently said of one of the country's great men that he "has been accumulating friends for fifty years." Some of you young people who are always engaged in violent friendships never seem to get ahead. You make friends, but you lose them. Indeed your idea seems to be on making a new friend to break with the old ones. There is no accumulation of friendships. No matter how much money a man may earn, he will never be rich if he spends it as fast as he makes it. Likewise, no matter how many friends you acquire, you will not be rich in friends if you drop an old friend as soon as you make a new one. Accumulating friends is far more important to happiness than accumulating money. What sort of start are you making?—Forest Standard.

At the morning service the rector preached on Jeremiah 52:4, preaching on the history of Jerusalem up to the present time At the evening service the new Litany Desk was used for the first time and the Litany was read. The sermon given was based on Acts of Apostles 20:28, dealing with the meanings of the church as taught in Holy Scripture and the duty of the people today to maintain the church. Treasure her with care,
For you'll never know her value
'Till you see her vacant chair.
