Daily British Whig. WEDN'SDAY EVEN'G, JULY 9, 1873.

IF I SHOULD DIE TO-NIGHT.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would look upon my quiet face,
Before they laid it in its resting place,
And deem that death had left it almost fair;
And, laying snow white flowers against my hair,
Would smooth it down with tearful tenderness
And hold my hands so empty and so cold to-night.

If I should die to-night,
My friends would call to mind, with loving thought,
Some kindly deed the icy hand had wrought;
Some gentle word the frozen lips had said;
Errands on which the willing feet had sped;
The memory of my selfishness and pride,
My hasty words would all be put aside,
And so I should be loved and mourned to-night.

If I should die to-night,
Even hearts estranged would turn once more to me,
Recalling other days remorsefully;
The eyes that chill me with averted glance
Would look upon me as of yore, perchance,
And soften in the old familiar way:
For who could war with dumb, unconscious clay!
So I might rest, forgiven of all, to-night.

AN INQUIRING SUBSCRIBER IN DANBURY.

A MAN VISITS THE EDITOR TO FIND "WHO PRINTED THAT PIECE"

He came in with an interrogation in one eye, and with a stick in one hand. One eye was covered with a handkerchief and one arm was in a sling. His bearing was that of a man with a settled purpose in view.

"It was to see," said he, "the man that puts things into this paper."

We intimated that several of us earned a frugal livelihood in that way.

"Well, I want to see the man which cribs things out of the other papers. The fellow who writes mostly with shears, you understand."

We explained to him that there were seasons when the gifted among us, driven to frenzy by the scarcity of ideas and events, and by the clamorous demands of an insatiable public, in moments of emotional insanity plunged the glittering shears into our exchanges. He went on, calmly, but in a voice tremulous with suppressed feeling, and indistinct through the recent loss of half a dozen or so of his front teeth.

"Just so. I presume so. I don't know much about the business, but I want to see a man, a man that printed that little piece about pouring water down a drunken man's spine of his back and making him instantly sober. If you please, I want to see that man. I would like to talk with him."

Then he leaned his stick against our desk, and spit on his serviceable hand, and resumed his hold on the stick, as though he was weighing it. After studying the stick a minute, he added in a somewhat louder tone:—

"Mister, I came here to see that 'ere man. I want to see him bad."

We told him that particular man was not in.

"Just so. I presume so. They told me before I came that the man I wanted to see wouldn't be anywhere. I'll wait for him. I live up north, and I've walked seven miles to converse with that man. I guess I'll sit down and wait."

He sat down by the door and reflectively pounded the floor with his stick, but his feeling would not allow him to keep still.

"I suppose none of you didn't ever pour much cold water down any drunken man's back to make him instantly sober, perhaps?"

None of us in the office had ever tried the experiment.

"Just so. I thought just as like as not you had not. Well, Mister, I have. I tried it yesterday, and I have come seven miles on foot to see the man that printed that piece. It wasn't much of a piece, I don't think; but I want to see the man who printed it, just a few minutes. You see, John Smith, he lives next door to my house, when I'm to home, and he gets how come-you-so every little period. Now, when he's sober, he's all right, if you keep out of his way; but when he's drunk, he goes home and breaks dishes, and tips over the stove, and throws the hardware around, and makes it inconvenient for his wife, and sometimes he gets his gun and goes out calling on his neighbors, and it ain't pleasant.

"Not that I want to say anything about Smith; but me and my wife don't think he ought to do so. He came home drunk yesterday and broke all the kitchen windows out of his house, and followed his wife around with the carving-knife talking about her liver, and after a while he lay down by my fence and went to sleep. I had been reading that little piece, it wan't much of a piece, and I thought if I could pour some cold water down the spine on his back, and make him sober, it would be more comfortable for his wife, and a square thing all around. So I poured a bucket of spring water down John Smith's spine on his back."

"Well," said we, as our visitor paused, "did it make him sober?" Our visitor took a firmer hold of his stick and replied with increased emotion:

"Just so. I suppose it did make him sober as a judge in less time than you could say Jack Robinson; but, mister, it made him mad. It made him the maddest man I ever see, and Mister John Smith is a bigger man than me, and stouter. He is a great deal stouter. Bla—bless him, I never knew he was half so stout till yesterday, and he's handy with his fists, too. I should suppose he is the handiest man with his fists I ever saw."

"Then he went for you, did he?" we asked innocently.

"Just so. Exactly. I suppose he went for me about the best he knew, but I don't hold no grudge against John Smith; I suppose he ain't a good man to hold a grudge against. I want to see the man who printed that piece. I want to see him bad. I feel as though it would soothe me to see that man. I want to show him how a drunken man feels when you pour water down the spine of his back. That's what I come for."

Our visitor, who had poured water down the spine of a drunken man's back, remained until about 6 p.m., and then went up street to find the man who printed that little piece. The man he is looking for started for Alaska last evening, for a summer vacation, and will not be back before September, 1873.—Danbury News.

Uniform Currency.

Before the beginning of the year 1874 there will be in the hands of the thirty-eight millions of people comprising the German Empire a uniform money, minted on the decimal and metric system. At the same time France, Belgium, Switzerland and Greece, numbering in all seventy-two million souls, will have a common money based on the French franc. With this the new German money is in substantial accord. The German money is almost exactly translatable into our own at five marks for a dollar, and into English sovereigns at twenty-four marks for a pound. The new Austrian florin, now used throughout the Austro-Hungarian Zollverein, that is to say, by forty million people, is equivalent for forty-eight cents gold of our money, or to the English two shillings. In a few years an almost uniform money will be used by all the leading nations of the world, and thus trade, commerce and businessbe made more easy, certainly and reliable.

Clerical Fun.

In the newly published volume of Monographs of Lord Houghton there is, in one of Sidney Smith, the following story of his clerical fun in Yorkshire.

He willingly assisted his neighbors in their clerical duties, and an anecdote of one of these occasions is still current in the district, for the authenticity of which I will not vouch, but which seems to be good enough to be true. He dined with the incumbent on the preceding Saturday, and the evening passed in great hilarity, the squire, by name Kershaw, being conspicuous for his loud enjoyment of the stranger's jokes.

"I am very glad that I have amused you," said Mr. Sidney Smith at parting, "but you must not laugh at my sermon to-morrow."

"I should hope I know the difference between being here and at church," remarked that gentleman with some sharpness.

"I am not sure of that," replied the visitor.

"I'll bet you a guinea on it," said the squire.

"Take you," said the divine.

The preacher ascended the stops of the pulpit apparently suffering from a severe cold, with his handkerchief to his face, and at once succeed out the name "Kershaw" in various intonations. This ingenious assumption of the readiness with which a man would recognize his own name in sounds imperceptible to the ears of others, proved accurate.

The poor gentleman burst into a guffaw, to the scandal of the congregation; and the minister, after looking at him with stern reproach, proceeded with his discourse and won the bet.

PETTY SPITE.—A thoroughly French story reaches us by private letter from Alsace. The writer says: "We have found out one very nice way of annoying our oppressors. Very many of the Prussian officers have little white dogs. We catch these little white dogs and color their heads and shoulders red and the hind quarter blue, leaving a white streak in the middle, thus joining the French colors, red, white and blue. Then we let the little dogs go, and get around and hear the Prussians swear. It makes them very angry, indeed."

Very Sensible.—Horse dealers who are supposed to know what effects the interest, "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy," by the dozen and feed it to their horses for the purpose of improving their condition, which it always does—others should profit by their example. Remember the name, and see that the signature of Hurd & Co. is on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Newcastle, Ont., Proprietors for Canada. Sold by all Medicine dealers.

LISTEN, TARGET SHOOTERS.—At Belfast, Ireland, the final competition for the Ulster Plate occurred on June 14, at which Mr. James S. Lee was the victor. There were four competitors, and the distances shot at were one thousand and eleven hundred yards, Mr. Lee scoring fifty-nine. The Albert cup was shot for on the 21st inst., at the distance of twelve hundred yards, or nearly three quarters of a mile.

The Worcester (Mass.) Gazette says: "They who wish to advertise judiciously and cheaply can find no better medium through which to reach the great public than through Geo. P. Rowell & Co's Agency, New York.

☞ Is your throat sore, or are you annoyed by a constant cough? If so, use promptly "Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers."—They relieve the air passages of phlegm or mucous, and allay inflammation, and no safer remedy can be had for coughs, colds, or any complaint of the throat or lungs, and if taken in time their efficacy will soon be proved. Sold by all Druggists and country dealers. Price 25 cts. per box.

DR. WHEELER'S Compound Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya.—Prescott, June 20, 1872.—"My wife for a number of years has been suffering from Asthma and Disease of the Heart. Her breathing was short and quick, at times causing great distress and apprehension of impending death, and she was greatly prostrate with general debility. At night she was constantly subject to attacks of great difficulty of breathing, the surface of the body becoming cold, and she was apparently lifeless, being restored only by great exertion on the part of attendants. She began taking your medicine about a year ago, and she has not had an attack since, and is in the enjoyment of very comfortable health. I have great reason to be thankful for her extraordinary improvement. W. ARMSTRONG, Landing Waiter."
