A Story About Mrs. Hayes.

Yesterday I was talking with a member of the Twenty-third Ohio who went on with the regiment at the beginning. He related a number of anecdotes of Mr and Mrs Hayes but the following is so good and so nearly coincides in character with Mr Riddle's story that I cannot refrain from relating it:

"It was during the first months of our being out, when we had as yet known but little of the hardships of war. One day Mrs Hayes arrived in camp, but the fact was not generally known. James Saunders was a member of my company. Jim—as he was called—was a tall, lank, unsuspecting, awkward country boy—a good soldier, but not overly smart in detecting a joke. Consequently, the boys used frequently to 'sell' him quite badly, but he took it all in good part, and was entirely ready the next time a sell came along to 'bite' at it.

"For some time there had been sad need of some means of mending our clothes. This need was being discussed the next day after Mrs Hayes' arrival, and Jim was especially strong in his expressions of need for some one to mend his blouse, which really was in a very unpresentable condition.

"'Why, Jim,' said one of the boys, 'didn't you know that there is a woman in camp whose business it is to mend the boys' clothes?'

"'No,' said Jim in astonishment; 'where is she?'

"'Up at the Colonel's tent,' said the other; 'I was there and had her fix my coat yesterday, and she did a smackin' job, too.'

"'Golly,' said Jim, 'I'll go up then, this very afternoon, and git my blouse doctored. That is very handy, indeed.'

"True to his word Jim called around at the Colonel's tent, and, with his hat under his arm, presented himself, with his awkwardest bow, at the entrance. He was received with marked politeness by the Colonel and the boys who were lurking about appreciating the joke waited developments. In a few moments Jim again appeared outside in his shirt-sleeves, and the radiant smile that lit up his honest features showed that he had not been rebuffed, at least. Calling him aside, where a group of the boys were gathered, the following conversation took place:

"'Well, Jim, did you find your woman?'

"'Of course I did. She was just a settin' there, and she's a mighty good lookin' woman too.'

"'What did you say?' all chuckling.

"'Why, when I went in I told the Colonel that I heard there was a woman there to do sewing for the boys, and as my blouse needed mendin' and buttons sewed on, I had come to get it done. He kind of smiled, and turned to the woman settin' there and asked her if she could fix the blouse for me, and she said she could as well as not, as she had nothing special on hand. So I took it off and left it, the Colonel tellin' me to call 'round this afternoon and git it. You all seem to laugh, but I don't see anything funny. If she is here to do the sewin', why not do mine?'

"This was too much. The boys all broke out into a loud chorus of laughter, and as soon as it subsided one of them said:

"'Jim, don't you know that that woman is the Colonel's wife?'

"'I don't care; she's a lady, anyhow,' as though that didn't follow; 'and I am goin' to git my blouse, just as she told me to.'

"And he did go, and was received in that manner which made him forget himself and his awkwardness, and she restored his blouse to him in perfect repair.

"This little incident was all that was needed to fix the affections of all the boys upon the Colonel's wife, and whenever she appeared again in camp she was certain to receive the warmest welcome.

"Poor Jim died in a Southern hospital and his name may now be seen upon the monument standing in the village square at Mesopotamia, Trumbull County, in this State; and we have often wondered if the President and his wife ever think of mending his blouse rather than let parties to a sell upon an innocent soldier-boy."

Cost of Living Two Hundred and Fifty Years Ago.

Barber's History of New England, edition of 1841, page 175, says: "The expense of each planter to provision himself was quite small, if we may judge from an estimate furnished by Mr Jocelyn for the information of proposed emigrants. A similar estimate had been previously made by Captain Smith (Pocahontas John) with reference to Virginia. He says: "Victuals to last one man a year, eight bushels of meal, £2; two bushels of peas, 6s; two bushels of oatmeal, 9s, one gallon of aqua vitæ (brandy); 2s. 6d, one gallon of oil, 3s. 6d; two gallons of vinegar 2s.;" total £3 8s., equal to $14 (!) Who has the courage to talk about economy after such an exhibit of the cash cost to live two hundred and fifty years ago? Not a word said about tea, coffee, sugar, molasses, flour, butter, pork, beef, fish, milk, beans and tobacco, without which last many people couldn't live a week—at least they think so. Is there a criminal in the land, or on the globe, kept the above square diet? The brandy must have been a very modest article at fifty-six cents a gallon, one dram a week, and the same of oil. It is a curious scrap of history and a sample of very intense economy.—Boston Journal.

The body of Mme. Cauchon, wife of the newly appointed Lieutenant Governor of Manitoba, was, after death, laid out in state, robed in violet velvet and guarded by a military detachment. When it was lowered into the Cathedral vault her husband was overcome with emotion and would not quit the spot. The Protestant churches were all draped with mourning, and their pastors paid tributes to the dead woman. Mme. Cauchon was a native of Quebec, a woman of rare charms and talents, so accomplished indeed that she made her husband, a man bitterly hated by his political opponents and not over much beloved by his political friends, almost popular. She had hurried to Winnipeg to die, a day after he took his oath of office, her death being due in part to the fatigue of the journey, in part, it is said, to the reception of a brutal letter from some anonymous opponent of his, threatening his life. She had previously been needlessly alarmed by sensational despatches declaring that his entrance to Manitoba would be opposed, that he would be lynched and so on.

WILL CURE CONSUMPTION.

To all suffering from the following diseases a ray of hope is offered through the kindness of a missionary friend who has sent me the formula of a purely vegetable medicine which has long been used by the native medicine men of Hindostan; for the positive and radical cure of consumption, bronchitis, asthma, catarrh, dyspepsia, throat and lung difficulty, general debility, loss of manhood and all nervous affections, its power has been tested in hundreds of cases without a failure. I now feel it my sacred duty as far as possible to relieve human misery, and will send the recipe—free of charge—to any person who may desire it with directions for using. Sent by return mail by addressing with two stamps naming this paper Dr. O. R. Brigham, Drawer 28, Utica, N.Y.

LOST—On the 5th December, from Mr J. Smith's, near Inverary, a BLACK COLLIE DOG, brindled on legs and belly. Anyone giving information to Mr Smith or to this Office will be rewarded.
