EUGENIA

On Tuesday evening, March 7, about sixty guests assembled at the "Eugenia House" and were entertained by the host, Mr. Peter Munshaw, who was celebrating his seventy-second birthday anniversary. The party was given in honor of friends visiting from Niagara Falls and Tonawanda, New York. In the spacious dining room a jolly crowd enjoyed themselves by indulging in the old time dances to the peppy music supplied by Messrs. Jacob Williams and Walker Sloan on their violins, with organ accompaniment. While some danced, others enjoyed themselves at cards or social chat. After lunch came a pleasing half hour program of music by radio. This was by request and was rendered wonderfully by "Little Freddie Large and his orchestra" now playing with Jan Garber, Netherland Plaza, Cincinnatti, Ohio, over W.L.W. During the program Freddie sang "When You're Smilin" and his brother, Gerald, sang "My Darling," these selections dedicated to their mother who was visiting her father, Mr. Munshaw, at this time, and for Mrs. Netter (Geraeld's wife's mother) of Tonawanda, N.Y., a special number was rendered by her son, Fritz, who is also a member of Freddie's band. As the years have gone by, the boys' voices have improved greatly. Before the family left here we were always pleased to hear them when they took part in social functions. Earlier in the day special numbers were played for Mr. Munshaw by Mr. Ken Large and his Canadians from Montreal over CKAC with his brother, Rolph, featuring a special number. Freddie's program commenced at 1.15 o'clock a.m. to "End a Perfect Day" for his grandfather. We extend our best wishes to Mr. Munshaw and hope he may live to enjoy many more happy returns of his birthday.

HEALTH by Frederick Tennyson, M.D.

A HEALTH SERVICE OF THE CANADIAN MEDICAL ASSOCIATION AND LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN CANADA

MENTAL HEALTH

To meet the problems of everyday life, as they arise, requires a healthy mental attitude. It is a test of mental health to note whether the individual successfully meets the strains of social, domestic and economic life, or whether he shows, in some way or other, the beginnings of abnormal behaviour.

Human beings are forever reacting to the influences of environment. These reactions are seen in their emotional as well as their physical responses. Just as there are different degrees of physical disability, so also there are individuals who show varying degrees of emotional mal-adjustment.

The foundations of mental health are laid down in childhood. It is the responsibility of parents, chiefly the mother, to see that the early lessons of behaviour are correctly taught. The jealousies, temper tantrums and unhealthy attachments of early life to mention only a few items, are largely preventable. If they are not prevented, they may lead to even greater problems during adolescence and maturity. Threats, scoldings, naggings and whippings are never effective in correcting an undesirable trait. They often contribute to seclusiveness, extreme sensitiveness and even delinquencies.

The insistence by parents that a child do as well at school as the child next door, or, in other ways, the holding up of a standard that is bound to reflect itself in feelings of inferiority. We need not wonder that such an individual later cuts himself off completely from his friends and becomes self-centred in his thoughts. Eventually, further deviations from the normal may occur, until the unhappy victim is shunned by former friends and resigned as "queer" by all and sundry.

The whole situation, as regards abnormal behaviour, has changed materially during recent years. Due to the work of mental hygiene institutes and child guidance clinics in the large centres, and increasing interest everywhere, mental disorders are being viewed from a new angle. Careful analysis has shown that the majority of cases of mental derangements are purely functional and have their origin in faulty habits and undesirable personality traits, dating from childhood and adolescence.

There is need for a general broadening of sympathy for those who suffer from affliction of the mind, and there is a like need for preventive measures to be put into early practice if the best results are to be achieved.
