Judge Coursol's Address.

The admirable system of Constitutional Government under which we live, whilst making us the arbiters of our destiny, imposes upon us responsibilities of the gravest kind. The fate of the country is in our hands, and it devolves on every citizen to accomplish what circumstances may require of him. I appear before you to-day in, for me, a new and serious position, because I consider that in so doing, I am but performing what my country requires of me as my share of a public duty. If by coming forward, I have been too presumptuous, you, gentlemen, will say so unhesitatingly. I rely on your judgment and wisdom, and I will thank you for a frankness that will ensure for me during the remainder of my days, the repose of private life.

Gentlemen, witnessing the painful spectacle of our interminable financial crisis, of our numberless misfortunes, and that universal feeling of distrust that is paralyzing our courage and our activity, I felt it to be the duty of every worthy citizen to make an effort to ward off from our families, and our firesides, the merciless scourge of poverty. The evil is, beyond doubt, a public and general one, and by public influences alone can it be combatted. Private rivalries must sink into utter oblivion; it is to the civil power, to the hand of the statesman, to the penetrating glance of the political economist that we must apply for the remedy. You, gentlemen, make and unmake Ministers and governments, and the general elections are neither more or less than a grand court of assizes where you are the judges. The Ministers of to-day may not be the Ministers of to-morrow, and now is the time for you to praise or to blame, to strike down or to render permanent it is for you to lay down your conditions. What shall they be? I shall endeavor to assist you in your serious deliberations, and in a few weeks you will let me know whether I have struck the true note.

Our Government has now ruled us for five years. They took charge of a prosperous country; they now return it to us exhausted, nearly ruined, deprived of its capital, and hampered in its labour. What have they done with our prosperity? That is the question they must answer unequivocally.

Gentlemen, I have always belonged to the grand Conservative school of politics. How could I have chosen any other, having spent my early manhood in the intimacy of that great and noble patriot, Sir L. H. Lafontaine, and of the Hon. Mr Morin? Having spent many years, at the call of my country, in the calm retirement of the Magistracy, I owed it to my conscience to raise myself above party strife, without, however, remaining indifferent to the interests of the commonwealth. Governments succeded one another without its being my privilege to judge them. I witnessed the advent of the Mackenzie Government, and, if it had not my sympathies, at least it enjoyed my respect, and I cannot reproach myself with having in any way trammelled the liberty of its action. If I to-day interfere it is because I cannot any longer remain an unmoved spectator of our ruin. I feel myself called upon to strike the warning note, and without a pang of regret I quit the honors and peaceful tranquility of a seat on the judicial bench to assist, if it be not too late, in saving our common country.

You know as well as I that we are in need of a native industry, for our industries are the representatives of our capital and our toil. Men will speak to you of commerce and the restrictions placed upon it as though it sufficed for a country to purchase in order to boast of its commercial enterprise. Do not forget, gentlemen, that foreign goods represent foreign labor, no matter to what extent we may flood our country with them. A country grows rich out of the products of the toil of its children. An article manufactured by a mechanic during his day's labor, forms part of the wealth of the country, and nothing is lost in its production; it is so much net gain. If we rest satisfied with importing foreign products, we shall be obliged to give in exchange for them their equivalent in money. Thus we might import unceasingly, and yet never do a sound commercial business unless we ourselves are manufacturers. Had we manufactories, had we the means of giving employment to the strong arms that are outstretched for labor, we should see the raw material around and about us developed into products that would add largely to our wealth. Those products would in their turn develop a commerce far more stable, more enduring and remunerative than that which drives our capital out of the country. Every year there is sent out of Canada over twenty millions of dollars for the purchase of articles, the greater part of which could be manufactured at home. We must endeavor to retain the money in our own hand—it is necessary for the support, the education and comfort of our families. To secure this I now come before you soliciting your aid in the accomplishment of my task. I appeal to you as the advocate of protection, which the Mackenzie Government openly denounces.

Protection is the main plank of my political platform; by it alone can our manufacturers be revived, and labor given to the willing hands of the people. I desire Protection sincerely and frankly; it shall be the special object of my political career, if your votes secure me a seat in Parliament. This question I shall deal with irrespective of men or political parties. I wish to see the Mackenzie Government overthrown, because they are ruining the country by a contrary policy, and no future Administration shall obtain my support, unless its policy be one of Protection to our native industries. I am anxious for such Protection as will be reasonable and just, such as can be applied, as everyone knows, without increasing the taxes that are imposed on the people. Such a policy of Protection, instead of increasing the cost of articles of prime necessity, would necessarily decrease it, for, after a time, our manufactories having acquired strength and perfection, we could manufacture as cheaply as our foreign competitors, and would thus save the cost of transportation and Customs duties, which represent at least a quarter of the value of imported goods.

GENTLEMEN,—I oppose the Mackenzie Government for other reasons as well. I oppose that Government because they have taken from Montreal the terminus of the Pacific Railway. By changing the route of that railway, and locating it in the south of Lake Nipissing, they have deprived the Province of Quebec of the means of direct communication with that great artery. They have placed us at the mercy of the Canada Central, over which we can only reach the Pacific railway through a tortuous and lengthened route, and thus the distance from Montreal to the Province of Manitoba and British Columbia is increased over that from Toronto by 220 miles, whilst by the plan of the former Government the difference in the distance was only 60 to 80 miles.

These, gentlemen, are the views I intend to lay before you during the present campaign; you will decide whether they are sound and in harmony with your interests. I claim your suffrages feeling convinced that in their realization we shall find true the welfare of our common country.

Judge Coursol was elected by a large majority.

Storing Potatoes.

Every method has been tried by farmers to store and preserve their potatoes through winter, and we may say until potatoes come again. It is the most valuable of all vegetables, though here and there we find a writer who undertakes to tell us it is universally consumed in all civilized countries, as where it cannot be grown it is imported, which can be done long distances without injury, when ventilation is attended to. In storing potatoes several methods are adopted, yet they are all practically the same, the object being to protect them against freezing, whether buried in pits or stored in cellars. The first consideration is to keep them in perfect darkness; the next is, that the bins should not be too deep—not over three feet—to prolong warmth and cause them to sprout. When stored in the field, straight trenches are dug, say twenty feet in length, and four or five feet wide which are filled to the depth of three feet with potatoes, then well covered with straw, on top of which put eighteen or twenty inches of earth. In a pit twenty feet long there should be about three gas escapes or ventilation openings, which should be plugged with straw and covered with a board set at an angle to turn the rain. If in cellars, barns or otherwise, the bins should be covered with rugs, old carpeting or straw. Those intended for late spring sales should be frequently examined and all sprouts removed, for as soon as a potato begins to sprout it loses its solidity, dryness and quality.
