Family Matters.

ODOURS FROM COOKING PREVENTED.—Put one or two red peppers, or a few pieces of charcoal, into the pot where ham, cabbage, etc., is boiling, and the house will not be filled with the offensive odours.

TO CLEAN PAINT.—Whitiag and clean warm water will clean white paint better than anything we know of. No soap need be used. Dip the wet cloth into the dry whiting, and it will clean the paint without removing it, as soap is apt to do.

RATS.—In one of our foreign exchanges we find the following recipe for exterminating rats. It consists of a mixture of two parts of well-bruised common quills and three parts of finely-chopped beacon made into a stiff mass, with as much meal as may be required, and then baked into small cakes; these are put down for the rats to eat, and are said to effect their complete extirpation.

SUGGESTIONS.—To keep cheese that has been cut tie it in a cloth and put it in a cool place; if mould appears wipe it off with a cloth.—Flour and meal of all kinds should be kept in a dry, cool place.—Oranges and lemons keep best when wrapped close in soft paper and laid in a drawer.—Keep coffee by itself in tin canisters, if possible; its odour affects other articles.—Keep tea in a close canister, to preserve its aroma.

CONDIMENTS.—It is not enough that food should contain alimentary principles in proper quantity; to render it really nutritious there must also be a supply of condiments. These may be compared to oil in a machine, which neither makes good the waste of material nor supplies motive power, but causes it to work better and easier, rendering essential service in the process of nutrition, though they are not of themselves able to prevent waste of any part of the body.

TO BOIL RICE AS IN INDIA.—Into a saucepan of two quarts of water, when boiling, throw a tablespoonfull of salt; then throw in one pint of rice, after it has been well washed in cold water; let it boil 20 minutes. Throw it out into a collender, and drain off the water. When this has been done, put back the rice into the pan or saucepan, dried by the fire, and let it stand near the fire for some minutes, or until required to be dished up; thus the grains appear separate and not mashed together.

WOOLLEN CLOTHES.—When woollens are worn threadbare, as is often the case in the elbows, cuffs, sleeves, etc., of men's coats, the coats must be soaked in cold water for half an hour; then taken out of the water and put on a board, and the threadbare parts of the cloth rubbed with a half-worn hatter's "card," filled with flocks, or with a prickly thistle, until a sufficient nap is raised. When this is done, hang the coat up to dry, and with a hard brush lay the nap the right way.

CEMENTS for joining metals or glass and wood are made as follows:—Melt resin, and stir in calcined plaster until reduced to a paste, to which add boiled oil—a sufficient quantity to bring it to the consistency of honey; apply warm. Or, melt resin, 180 parts, and stir in burnt umber 30 parts, calcined plaster 15 and boiled oil 8 parts. Or, dissolve glue in boiling water to the consistence of cabinet-maker's glue; then stir in sufficient wood ashes to produce a varnish-like mixture. While hot the surfaces to be united must be covered with this compound and pressed together.

COFFEE.—As a beverage, coffee is agreeable; but it should not be very strong, or drank too often, as it is undeniably a stimulant. Take only one cup at the regular meal, and that of a given, unvarying strength. In this way it may be used every day for a lifetime, not only without injury, but with greater advantage than an equal amount of cold water. We have heard of a lady who was for a long time in poor health, to the mystification of several physicians, whom she consulted, when at last they discovered that she made a most extravagent use of strong coffee many times a day—in fact she had a pot of coffee always at hand.—Following the advice to abstain from coffee, resulted in an immediate end of all her trouble.

POTATOES.—The potato containing the greatest quantity of starch is the most valuable variety, and a ready means of testing different sorts may be found both interesting and economical. The specific gravity of the tubers is, it appears, a fairly correct method of estimating the food value of different samples, and, in a rough and-ready but nevertheless approximately accurate way, this may be ascertained by putting cleaned potatoes into a strong solution of salt and water. If the solution is strong enough, all the tubers will float, but, by adding water to dilute the solution, some will be found to sink. These are the best potatoes, as far as nutritive value is concerned; those that float after repeated additions of water being the worst.

Salt as a Fertilizer.

For some time much attention has been paid to to the subject of sowing salt on grain. The effect of salt is to stiffen the straw and prevent the wheat from lodging. It sometimes has the additional effect of producing a clear, light-colored grain. Some farmers sow as much as a barrel per acre; one or two bushels will generally be sufficient. An English experiment made on the farm of the Royal Agricultural Society, of England, is as follows:—An acre of wheat dressed with 300 pounds of common salt yielded thirty-nine bushels of grain, with a proportionate amount of straw; while an adjoining acre, left unmanured, produced only twenty-nine bushels per acre with the straw imperfectly developed. The entire cost of the crop is not stated, but this experiment shows that the additional ten bushels resulting from the salt were produced at a cost of thirty cents each. In another case a piece of ground intended for wheat ploughed the preceding fall, and again in May, when it was sowed with salt and afterwards ploughed before seeding. On the 1st and 2nd of September, wheat was sown at the rate of two bushels to the acre. The crop when harvested yielded according to the estimate of the owner, Mr John Park, not less than forty bushels of grain to the acre, with a luxuriant growth of straw.

Winter Care for Colts.

It costs very little, if any, more to raise a good colt than a poor one; but many a good animal is ruined by improper treatment. Colts are generally weaned in the fall, and too frequently allowed to "rough it" through the ensuing winter. There is an ignorant notion among many farmers that such a course makes young animals hardy and tough. They may, perhaps, become tough little brutes by this treatment, or rather, want of it; but they will never be the same in symmetry, size and general durability as if they had been generously used. Colts should have a pint of oats daily, and be halter-broken. Their education should be begun now, and the first thing to be done is to accustom them to handling, brushing and restraint. Patience and kindness with the colt will go far to form a good disposition in the future horse. Provide them with a warm, light and well-ventilated stable.

Do not live a single hour of your life without doing exactly what ought to be done. If you have a cold, cure it; if you are hoarse, seek relief; if you are troubled with a cough, apply the proper remedy—Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. This pleasant and powerful remedy is the finest curative agent known for all colds and those bronchial and pulmonary complaints arising from a cold. For sale by all dealers.

National Pills are applicable even for infants as well as adults.

There are thirty thousand gods in the Chinese religion, and not one of them is worth as much as Hagyard's Yellow Oil. For burns, bruises, sprains, cuts, wounds, etc., the Yellow Oil is without a rival. For horses it is wonderfully curative in galls, scratches, spavins, etc., and is the best friend of both man and beast. For sale by all dealers at 25 cents per bottle. Milburn, Bentley and Pearson, proprietors, Toronto.

National Pills keep the bowels in good condition.
