An Honest Man

Recently there died in St. Marys a man who deserves the title an "honest man." The following paragraph is taken from an obituary notice in the Journal-Argus of St. Marys: "An incident that occurred twenty-five years ago illustrates the type of man Mr. Lofft was. A fire occurred in his store and a lot of stock was destroyed. An insurance adjuster came up from Toronto and made a settlement with Mr. Lofft, which appeared to him to be fair. But nearly a year later, when Mr. Lofft had completed his annual stock-taking he concluded that the insurance people had allowed him too much and he sent the company a cheque for fifteen hundred dollars. The fire insurance company had never, in its long history, an experience of that kind, and scarcely knew where to credit the money on their books. The incident was known only to a few at the time, but we can be pardoned for mentioning it now to illustrate a phase of Mr. Lofft's character.

Confidence and courage are the essentials of success in meeting the present economic difficulties.

Too much alcohol in the mixture makes the motor get hot. And it has that effect on a party, too.

Japan quit the League of Nations and is concerned now about how many Leagues the Nations will allow her to proceed in China.

Local and Personal

The first spring thunder storm arrived Tuesday night.

Mr. Ken Kellar of Toronto is spending a few days in town.

Mr. and Mrs. F. Pinder spent last Thursday in the Queen city.

There is still an odd member of the travelling fraternity seeking for shelter in the village hoboe hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Radley of Toronto spent the past few days at their farm.

Congratulations are extended to Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Bellamy on the celebration on Sunday of their 49th wedding anniversary.

Mrs. R. Bentham visited in Toronto last week. Her daughter, Mrs. Len. Hill, returned with her and will spend the Easter holidays here.

The Artemesia Scarlet Chapter will meet in the Fraternal Hall, Flesherton, on Friday evening, April 14 at 8 p.m. G. Banks, W. C. C., W. Turney, Scribe.

Mrs. Edith Hammond, D. D. G. M. of Grey District, O.E.S., paid her official visit to Grey Chapter No. 170 on Monday evening, when there was a large attendance of members. A banquet was served by the ladies at the close.

Mrs. Martin Phillips returned to her home here on Monday, after spending the winter with her daughter in Toronto. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Buntz, of Detroit, who will remain with her for a month.

We have received a communication signed "Ratepayer," dealing with the taxation question. The writer neglected to give us his name and if he will supply this deficiency we will be pleased to print his letter. The name must be supplied with all communications, not for publication, but as a matter of good faith.

Mr. Fred McTavish of Regina paid a flying visit on Friday to his parents here. Fred was in Toronto with the Regina Pats, runners-up for the Memorial Cup, won by Newmarket. He left for home Saturday night, along with the team. We were pleased to have a chat with Fred for a few moments. He is with the General Motors at Regina and appears as though the west was agreeing with him.

Should Be Change In Penitentiary System

During the week Mr. P. G. Davies, Conservative member for Athabasca, Alta., made a strong speech against the gold standard. He argued that gold was too scarce to be a safe base for currency and that it was not equitably distributed. He suggested that if currency cannot be increased without an increase in gold base, the logical thing to do would be to put the unemployed to mining gold. I have often said the same thing, so am comforted to hear Mr. Davies agree with me. The solution really lies in abandoning gold as a basis of currency. It is noteworthy, too, that the Hon. Charles Stewart, in his speech on the budget, came out in support of controlled inflation.

Usually the budget debate, once begun is carried on without interruption until it has been disposed of, but this year estimates, government resolutions, etc., have broken the budget debate into many parts, which I think makes it less interesting.

The debate on penitentiaries was one such interruption. The recent riots, the appointment of many new officials and the government resolution seeking to take the chief penitentiary appointments away from the jurisdiction of the Civil Service Commission, have aroused a much-needed interest on the part of the public in the penal system.

Many years ago when Mr. C. J. Doherty was Minister of Justice, a Royal Commission was appointed which studied carefully penal systems in English speaking countries and on the basis of their study made recommendations. Had these recommendations been carried out the riots, I believe, would not have occurred and certainly the two moving stories told in the House this week by General Ross, the member for Kingston, and the Hon. Hugh Guthrie, Minister of Justice, would never have had foundation in fact. General Ross said: "There is something at the bottom of all this trouble and I have repeatedly pointed out what I think it is. Let me illustrate. On one occasion a boy 15 years of age, and wearing knee breeches, was brought in to the penitentiary accompanied by a six-footer. What was the trouble? This man had arrived at the boy's home on the Bay of Quinte; the boy knew no crime, no wrong. It is true that his father was not all he should have been, but the boy had never gone wrong. He had a dog and a sleigh, and the man coaxed him one day to hitch the dog to the sleigh and come along with him. The boy escorted the man across the Bay to a summer camp and something was stolen from it. Along with this man that 15 year old boy was sent to Portsmouth Penitentiary for two or three years. When he arrived at the institution in those knee breeches he burst into tears. What was the reason? 'I am afraid,' he said 'that nobody will feed my dog.' That boy knew no crime until he got into the penitentiary; now he is there on his fourth commitment and he stands today as one of the ring leaders of this riot. Who is responsible for such a situation."

In the first place a boy of 15 should not be sent to pentitentiary and in the second place a penitentiary should be run in a way to develop citizens, not "repeaters." It is said that every conviction costs the State $1,200; if that is so, the four commitments of this boy have cost the State much more than his education and development would have.

In August of 1931 a plot was uncovered in the Kingston Penitentiary and as a consequence seven or eight prisoners were seized and placed in "isolated cells." This means solitary confinement and usually very poor food. They were allowed to remain in these cells until General Ormond arrived twelve months later. Can we wonder that men act as brutes if they are treated as brutes?

The Co-operative Commonwealth Federation moved an amendment to the budget which in a rather lengthy preamble outlined conditions, and as remedies moved: "That in the opinion of this House the government should give immediate consideration to the introduction of such measures as may

(a) Make available the real credit of the nation through the instrumentality of a national central bank and render possible the utilization and control of the credit for the legitimate needs of the people of this country;

(b) Bring about such a degree of controlled inflation as would stabilize the price level of our chief commodities at a point where it would bear a reasonable relation to the cost of production and to incurred obligations;

(c) Provide employment and purchasing power of our people through the above mentioned means and where necessary, by the direct use of our national credit in the construction of public works of various kinds and in other ways which might be suggested, including the construction of houses, etc.;

(d) Insure more equitable distribution of the national income through well-considered methods of taxation and the legislative control of interest, profits and investment.

(e) Nationalize our insurance systems, including the establishment of such systems of social insurance as may be necessary for the protection and well-being of our people."

I was sorry to have missed writing last week, but the flu kept me a prisoner in a Toronto hotel and there just was not anything I could do about it.

A MINIATURE CALF

When it comes to producing diminutive stock John Lark, who lives 1½ miles southwest of the C.N.R. depot here, has everything his own way and the latest arrival on his ranch, in the form of a calf, had such a novelty feature to it that the proprietor had occasion to put into use his weights and measures to complete the records. The dwarf calf when a week old had the pattern of a jack rabbit in its mould, being but 25 lbs. in heft, when the normal weight is 75 lbs., while its height was 18 inches and its length 22, which makes it the smallest offspring in the cattle class ever known in this district. The mother of the new arirval tips the scales at 1,250 lbs., while its father is a hefty sire, thus showing that it doesn't inherit its diminutiveness from either parent.—Walkeron Herald and Times.

Sale Prices In 1919

A subscriber left us the following clipping from a Sun of fourteen years ago and we are reprinting it to show the difference in farme prices prevailing in March 1919, as compared with those of to-day; "W. D. Weir & Son and Geo. Glass, auctioneers, conducted one of the most successful sales ever held in this district on Thursday last for Mr. S. J. Miller. The sale totalled $9,000. Nine brood sows sold for $901; and the 25 pigs sold for $2,287; purebred cows sold at from $100 to $207 each and one 6 months' old brought $80. Eight matured grade cows averaged $142.50 each, while the heifers coming in brought as high at $138 each. Four colts, one rising 2, two rising 3 and one rising 4 years old, brought $787. The 10 horses and colts sold averaged $156 each. Mr. Miller is to be congratulated on the quality and condition of the stock offered and on the splendid way in which he managed the sale. Besides what was sold Mr. Miller reserved about $3,000 worth of stock, grain, etc., which as not offered.—Milverton Sun.

TO KEEP FLOWERS FRESH

If the stems are of the hard, woody variety, split the ends for a distance of an inch and a half. Clip off a small bit of the stem of each flower every day. A teaspoon of salt, and half a teaspoon of soda dissolved in the water will help to prolong their life. A small piece of charcoal helps to purify the water. Roses require very cold water to keep them fresh and for that reason they should be placed in a bowl or vase of generous capacity as a small quantity of water will become warmer sooner than a larger one. Change the water twice a day or oftener if necessary, though not cold enough to freeze.
