LIABILITY OF OWNER OF STRAY HORSES

It was established at the sitting of division court here Tuesday that the owner of animals pasturing on the road in townships that forbid animals to run at large is responsible for the damage to a car that happens to get into collision with such animals. Ed McLean of this town some months ago when coming down from Barrie collided with a horse near Thornton and sustained some damages to his car. After seeking settlement from the owner of the horse without success he entered suit for $57. The case was heard and adjourned a couple of times but this week judgment was handed out giving McLean his claim in full and also imposing the costs of the case on the owner of the horse.—Alliston Herald.

We wish to express our sincere thanks to the many friends of this district for letters of sympathy and flowers sent in our recent sad bereavement.
