IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Malcolm McDonald, who passed away February 8th, 1928.

—Sadly missed by His Family.

It is charged that in Middlesex some of the trustees get positions as janitors and have the children do the work. Must be a great temptation to toss the rubber strap in the box stove.

MRS. GEO. BLAKELY DIES AT PROTON

Proton Correspondence

On Sunday, February 4th., the death occurred of Sarah Ludlow, widow of the late George Blakeley of Proton Station in her 72nd year. She was born on the farm just east of the village of Proton, the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Ludlow and grew to womanhood there. In 1894 she married the late George Blakeley and they resided for short periods of time in Dundalk, Sault Ste. Marie and Corbetton, later returning to Proton Station, where in 1922 her husband passed away, leaving her in lonely childless widowhood, their only child having died in infancy.

Mrs. Blakeley was much beloved by a large circle of friends. She was of a retiring disposition, a beautiful character, living a quiet and exemplary life. In her youth she was confirmed in the Anglican church.

During her six weeks illness she was tenderly cared for by her sister-in-law, Mrs. Wm. Ludlow, and by several of her nieces.

The funeral service was held in the Anglican church on Tuesday, Feb. 6. Rev. Mr. Hereford, rector of Shelburne Anglican church took charge of the service. Interment was made in Flesherton cemetery.

BALING SHEEP PELTS

When sheep pelts have to be shipped a long distance to market, they should be carefully spread wool side down, paying close attention to see that all wrinkles or folds are carefully straightened out in the head, side and leg pieces. Salt—about a pound and a half to a pelt—should then be evenly sprinkled over the pelt, which is left spread out for a few days until the salt melts and soaks in. It can then be hung out to dry. Drying may be hastened if the pelts are stretched by tacking to a wall or fence in a manner similar to the practice in handling the pelts of fur-bearing animals. When the sheep pelts are thoroughly dry they may be shipped in safety by placing one on top of the other, and baled in lots of 15 to 25 according to size and weight.

A pretty but quiet wedding was solemnized at the United church parsonage, Flesherton, at 3 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, January 30, 1934, when Miss Violet Vernon Fawcett, second youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Fawcett of Eugenia, became the bride of Mr. Harry Mander, Jr., an estimable young man of Toronto.

Rev. W. J. Scott performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Gladys (Mrs. T. Hazard), while Mr. Hazard acted as groomsman. The winsome young bride was attired in a becoming frock of pale green "honeymoon" crepe, gracefully long with exquisite trimming touches of white and brilliants. Her hat and other accessories were in harmony. She carried a beautiful bouquet consisting of talisman roses, baby's breath, gardiniao, freesia and maiden hair fern. She wore the groom's gift, a pendant of pale green, with ear rings to match.

After the nuptial knot was performed the bridal party motored to the home of the bride's parents where the immediate relatives and some invited guests were present. All sat down to a sumptuous wedding repast, including a three-storey bride's cake. Grace was sung, then a toast to the bride was proposed by Mrs. C. H. Martin and responded to by the groom in well chosen words. After all had done ample justice to the good things to eat, a very pleasant social evening followed in music, singing, contests, games and chat. Excellent music was supplied by Mr. Jake Williams, Mr. Bates Fawcett, and Mr. Jack Park.

The bride's travelling costume consisted of a kiltie green suit of wool pebble crepe with brown coat, hat and purse. After a short honeymoon with relatives in this district, the happy couple will take up residence at 156 Aldwich Ave., Toronto. Mr. Mander has a position with his father, Mr. H. Portlaw Correspondence

The death of Mr. Geo. Thompson, which occurred at the home of his son, Harry, following a paralytic stroke, has cast a gloom over this community. Deceased was the eldest son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Geo Thompson, respected pioneers of the Third Line. At a ratepayers meeting of the school section, called on Saturday by the trustees to fill a vacancy on the Board, the plumb fell to your scribe, who feels that after thirty years rest from this office, he is starting public life all over again.

Friends of this part were shocked to hear of the death of His Honor Judge Wright and the ending of a brilliant and useful life. Artemesia will mourn the passing of her distinguished son, Hon. Justice Wright.

The heavy fall of snow Saturday night made roads heavy, and affected attendance at churches. As it was though, a goodly number turned out to St. Columba on Sunday, it being communion service, which was conducted by Rev. J. A. Moir, M. A., with becoming reverence and solemnity. with the same sickness he had prev- with the same isckness he had previously, when he spent some time in Markdale hospital.

Mr. Chas. Saunders, expert electrician from Durham, is installing lights on the skating rink here. A few loads of snow could be spared off the surface just now, but willing hands soon overcome all obstacles.

Miss Lizzie Maher left on Wednesday last for a week's visit with friends.

Miss Alma McLean left on Thursday to further train for a nurse at Mimico. We wish her every success.

Mrs. Chislett of California spent ten days visiting at Mr. Wilfred Watson's and other friends and relatives.

Mr. T. Stewart Cooper showed some fine moving pictures in St. Columba church on the interesting subject of Robinson Crusoe, which was much enjoyed by an appreciative audience.

COMMON SENSE

"Common sense" is an old-fashioned term, but it expresses the manner in which we should consider our own health and the health of our families. A common-sense attitude towards health is not to think too much about it. Give it reasonable attention, and then take it as a matter of course that it will be all right.

When we know that vaccination prevents smallpox and that immunization prevents diphtheria it is a matter of common-sense to make use of these means for protection against these two diseases. Furthermore, when it is known that diphtheria takes its heaviest toll during the earliest years of life, common sense dictates that every child should be immunized before it is one year old.

We have come to accept the insurance principle as a sound practical method for securing group protection against those occurrences which we, as individuals, cannot prevent or control. The man of common sense takes out life insurance for the protection of his family.

Health departments are a form of health insurance. By uniting together and supporting a health department out of our taxes, we purchase protection against those diseases which can be controllel by group, rather than by individual effort. Common sense tells us that it is better in every way to pay a dollar or two more in taxes and avoid the occurrence of typhoid fever which would likely visit us if we did not have safe water, milk and food supplies.

Disease which is discovered early and treated promptly is much more likely to be cured than is disease which goes on for a long time, or which has become chronic. Common sense tells us that it would be wise for us to have our family doctor examine us, say once a year, so that, with his skill, he might detect disease even before we suspect it. In this way we are given the best possible chance to get rid of the disease completely.

We know that no two people are exactly alike, and so it is reasonable, when a person is ill, that he be treated as an individual. A common-sense attitude towards disease is to place the responsibility for the care of the sick person with the physician who is qualified, by training and experience, to give the care required. If anyone knew how to grow hair on bald heads, he would not need to advertise the remedy, and yet, in spite of their common sense, people believe what they read about cures through secret remedies.

Use your common sense to keep you healthy.
