"THE PENNY YE MEANT."

AN OLD STORY TOLD IN VERSE.

There's a funny tale of a stingy man,
Who was none too good, but might have been worse
Who went to his church on a Sunday night,
And carried along his well filled purse.

When the sexton came with his begging plate,
The church was but dim with the candle's light;
The stingy man fumbled all through his purse,
And choose a coin by touch and not sight.

It's an odd thing how guineas should be
So like unto pennies in shape and size.
"I'll give a penny," the stingy man said;
"The poor must not gifts of pennies despise."

The penny fell down with a clatter and ring!
And back in his seat leaned the stingy man.
"The world is so full of the poor," he thought,
"I can't help them all—I give what I can."

Ha, ha! how the sexton smiled, to be sure,
To see the gold guinea fall in his plate!
Ha, ha! how the stingy man's heart was wrung
Perceiving his blunder, but just too late!

"No matter," he said "in the Lord's account
That guinea of gold is set down to me,
They lend to Him who give to the poor!
It will not so bad an investment be."

"Na na mon," the chuckling sexton cried out;
"The Lord is no cheated—He kens thee well,
He knew it was only by accident
That out of they fingers the guinea fell!

"He keeps an account, no doubt, for the poor;
But in that account He'll set down to thee
Na mair o' that golden guinea, my mon,
Than the one bare penny ye meant to gie!"

There's comfort, too, in the little tale—
A serious side as well as a joke;
Be comfort for all the generous poor,
In the comical words the sexton spoke.

A comfort to think that the good Lord knows
How generous we really desire to be,
And will give us credit in His account
For all the pennies we long "to gie."

—St. Nicholas.

Time Tries all Things, and has proved that Dr Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is the remedy par excellence for the cure of coughs and colds, croup, whooping-cough, bronchitis, asthma, phthisic, sore throat and influenza. It cures coughs and colds instanter. It soothes the irritated parts; it heals the inflammation and even consumption itself yields to its magic influence.

Hemorrhoids (or Piles) are permanently cured by Mathieu's Pile Ointment, or money refunded. Price $1 per Pot, or 6 Pots for $5. Sold wholesale and retail by the Wingate Chemical Company, Montreal and retail by all druggists, or will be forwarded to any address on receipt of price by Dr. E. Mathieu, 198 Notre Dame Street, Montreal.

Burnett's Cocoaine for the hair has stood the test of time and competition. It has established a reputation for purity and efficacy in every quarter of the world. For twenty years it has been a favorite with the people and a leader with the trade. The name "Cocoaine" has become a valuable property. We have established our sole right to its use in several suits at law, thus protecting the public and ourselves from imposition.

Power of Speaking Restored.—Newash, Ontario, D.C., March 30, 1870. Mr Fellows—Sir: Some two months ago my son lost his voice. I became very anxious about him. None of the physicians could do him any good. Having heard of your Compound Syrup of Hypophosphites, I obtained a bottle. Strange to say, my son's voice was restored about two hours after taking the second dose. You are at liberty to publish this for the benefit of other sufferers.
JONAS FOTHERNGILL.

To Owners of Horses.—It is a well attested fact confirmed by the experience of thousands that "Darley's Condition Powders and Arabian Heave Remedy" for horses is superior to anything of the kind now or ever known. We know that it has been used in many cases the horse has been considered almost worthless, with the most satisfactory result, the horse having been restored to perfect soundness or so much benefitted that the complaint could scarcely be observed. Many such horses have afterwards been sold for from $50 to $100 more than they would have previously brought and were well worth the difference. Let all interested codsider this. Remember the name and see that the signature of Hurd & Co.'s on each package. Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., proprietors. Sold by all medicine dealers.

The efficacy of Bryan's Pulmonic Wafers in curing coughs, colds and all bronchial affections, and cheering the afflicted, has passed into a proverb. In the United States where these marvellous Wafers are known, they bear down all opposition and eclipse all rivalry; the demand for them has steadily increased for the last twenty years, until now the sales average over one hundred thousand boxes a year. Eminent members of the medical profession without number admit that they knew of no preparation producing such beneficial results as these Wafers. When taken in season they effect a permanent cure. Sold by all druggists and country dealers. Price 25c per box.

READ THIS TWICE.—Five to thirty drops of THOMAS' ECLECTRIC OIL will cure common Sore Throat. It never fails in Croup. It will cure a Cold or Cough in twenty-four to forty-eight hours. One bottle has cured Bronchitis of eight years standing; recent cases are cured in three to six days. It has restored the voice where the person had not spoken above a whisper in five years. As an outward application in all cases of pain or lameness, nothing like it has ever been known. One bottle will cure any case of Lame Back or Crick in the Back. For diseases of the Spine and contraction of the muscles it is unequaled. In Rheumatic or any other pain the first application does you good. It stops Ear Ache and the pain of a Burn in three minutes, and is altogether the best and cheapest medicine ever offered to the people—the cheapest, because it takes so little to do you good. It is composed of six of the best oils known, and nothing but oils. Is worth its weight in gold. Why not buy it to-day?—A B DesRochers, assistant postmaster, Arthabaskaville, P.Q, writes:—"Thirteen years ago I was seized by a severe attack of rheumatism in the head, from which I have nearly constantly suffered. After having used 'Thomas Eclectric Oil' for nine days, bathing the forehead, I have been completely cured, and have only used half a bottle. This I can certify under oath if you wish."—Rev J Mallory, of Wyoming, N Y, writes "Dr Thomas Eclectric Oil cured me of Bronchitis in one week. Dealers all over the country say, "We have never sold a medicine that has given such complete satisfaction as this."
Sold by all medicine dealers. Price 50 cents.
Prepared by S N Thomas, Phelps, N.Y., and Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, Ont., sole Agent for the Dominion. Note.—Eclectric—Selected and Electrized. Sold in Kingston by E. H. Parker J G King, Heath and Gunn, G S. tobart Jas. McCammon, and all medicine dealers

EPPS'S COCOA.—GRATEFUL AND COMFORTING.—"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavoured beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever their is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette. Made simply with Boiling Water or Milk.—Sold only in packets labelled—"JAMES EPPS & Co., Homœopathic Chemists, 48, Threadneedle Street, and 170, Piccadilly, Works, Euston Road and Camden Town, London."

ESSENCE OF LIFE is a sure cure for Seminal Weakness, Nervous Debility, Mental and Physical Prostration, &c. Obstacles to Marriage removed. All suffering from the errors of youth should send for a circular to HUBERT & CO., Sole Agents and Proprietors, No. 22 St. John St., Montreal, P.Q.

A 'Cotter's Saturday Night' in Danbury.

It is Saturday night—the dear close of a tossing, struggling restless week. To-morrow is the sabbath—when all labor and care are held in abeyance. Saturday night stands like a rock before the day of rest and says to toil and worry: "Thus far shalt though come, and no farther." Blessed Saturday night. The wearied husband and father approaches his home. He looks ahead and sees the light streaming in cheerful radience from the windows and wonders if that boy has got in the kindlings. He steps up on the stoop and opens the door. His faithful wife meets him at the entrance and greets him with, "Why on earth don't you clean your feet and not lug the house full of mud? Don't you know I've been scrubbing all day!" And thus he steps into the bosom of his family, grateful for the mercies he has received, and thankful that he has a home to come to when the worry and care and toil of the week are done. Yes, he is home now, and has set his dinner pail on one chair, and laid his hat and coat on another, and with his eyes full of soap from the wash, is shouting impetuously for the towel. Saturday night in the household! What a beautiful sight! The bright light, the cheerful figured carpet, the radient stove, the neatly laid table, with the steaming teapot, the pictures on the walls, the spotless curtains, the purring cat, and the bright eyed children rubbing their plates with their fingers and looking hungerily at the canned cherries. Even the wearied wife is visibly effected, and as she steps to a closet with his hat and coat, she unconsciously observes to her husband:

Will you never learn to hang your things up, or do you think I've nothing else to do but chase after you all the while you are in the house?"

He makes no reply, but as he drops into his seat at the table, with a sigh of relief, he says:

"What's the matter with that infernal lamp? Is the oil all out, or ain't the chimney been cleaned? It don't give no more light that a firebug."

"Turn it up, then," she retorts. It was right enough when I put it on the table, but I suppose the children have been fooling with it. They never can keep their hands out of mischief for an instant.

"I'll fool them,' he growls, "if they don't keep their fingers off'n things."

After this sally a silence reigns, broken only by a subdued rustle of plates and cutlery. Then comes a whisper from one of the youths, which is promptly met in a loud key by the mother:

"Not another mouthful, I tell you You have had one dish already, and that's enough. I ain't going to be up all night wrastling around with you, young woman and the quicker you straighten that face the better it'll be for you."

The offender looks with abashed inquiry into the faces of her brothers and sisters and gradually steals a glance into the face of her father; but finding no sympathy there, falls to making surreptitious glances at the mother, to the relief of herself and the intense edification of the other children.

The tea is finally over, the delightful Saturday-night's meal, and as the appeased father stretches back in his chair, and looks dreamily at the flames dancing in the stove, he says to his first born:—

"Is them kindlings cut, young man?"

Of course they have not been, and the youth replies:

"I'm going right out to do it now," and steps up lively for his hat.

"You'd better; and if I come home again and find them kindlings not cut, I won't leave a whole bone in your body. Do you hear me?"

"Yes pa."

"Well, then, start your boots."

They are started, and the relieved father comes back with his eyes to the glad flame, and watches it abstractly while his thoughs are busy with the bright anticipations of the coming day of rest.

"Ain't you going down the street, or are you going to sit there all night?" asks his wife. It's a sort of mechanical movement, without any apparent expression. There's got to be something got for dinner to-morrow, and I want you to go to Adam's an' see if my hat is done, an' Thomas must have a pair of shoes there ain't a bit of blacking in the house, resumes the mother. You can tell Borroughs that the last butter he sent up ain't fit for a hog to eat, an' if he ain't got anything better than that we don't want it. You'd better get a small piece of pork while you are down, an' if you see Parks ask him when he's coming here to fix that wall. He has got the plaster of an' there it stands, an' there's no use of trying to put the room to rights until the wall is fixed. I don't see what the old fool is thinking of to leave a room like that."

Hereupon the head of the house gets upon his feet, takes a brief, longing glance at the pleasant stove, and wants to know where in thunder his coat and hat are, and if nothing can be left where it is put. Then she tells him that if he would look where he ought to he would find the things fast enough. He does find them and goes into the kitchen, and a moment later appears with a very red face, and passionately asks if a basket can be kept in that house for five minutes at a time, and moodly follows his wife to where the basket is, and looks still more moody when he is brought face to face with it, and sarcastically asked if he could see a barn if it was in front of his nose. Thus primed with the invigorating nitterness of the home circle, he takes up his basket and goes down street, leaving his faithful wife to stand as a wall of granite between the children and the canned cherries and to finish up the work. As he reaches the gate the door opens and she shouts after him:

"Remember to get some matches; there ain't one in the house; and don't be all night, for I'm tired, an' want to get to bed at a decent hour if possible."

"Go to bed, then, an' shut up your mouth," and with this parting injunction he strides gloomly out into the darkness It is not exactly known what he is thinking of as he moves along, but it is doubtless of the near approach of the Sabbath, as he comes into the light of the stores it is evidence that bright influences and tender memories and glad antisipations are weaving themselves in his heart, for he meets Parks with a smile, and after a pleasant chat about the winter's prospect they parted laughing. Only twice in the trip does his face fall, and that's when he goes in after her hat, and when he gets the shoes. An half-hour later he is in the grocery sitting on a barrel, while his goods are being put up and carrying on an animated discussion with the grocer and several acquaintances. At nine o'clock he starts for home. He has several receipted bills in his pocket—each of which being in excess, of course, of what his wife has estimated before he left home and has he stumbles along with an aching arm, and stumbles against various obstructions, he remembers it is Saturday night, and the end of the week of toil, and tries to recall bits of verses and sentences of beautiful sentiment appropriate to the hour. He don't believe in grumbling at everybody, and so he reserves his trouble with the grocery bill, his indignation at the milliner, and the various anhoyances he has been subjected to, until he gets home, and then he hurls his thunder at all these people and objects through the head of his wife. And she, dear companion of his life, having got the children from back of the stove and to bed by the hair and discovered that he has forgotton the matches, and got more bone than meat in the steak, is fully prepared to tell him what she just thinks of him.

And while they talk, the flame in the stove dance happily, the lamp sheds a rich soft glow over the room, and the colors in the carpet and in the pictures, and the reflective surfaces of the mantal ornaments blend into a scene of quiet beauty. It is the night before the Sabbath—the calm, restful Sabbath—and as the two workers prepare to seek their well earned repose, she says that if she has got to be harassed like this she'll be in her grave before the winter's over, and he is confident that if the bills keep mounting up as they are doing the whole family will be in the poor-house the first thing they know.—Danbury News.

NOBLE SELF SACRIFICE.—An instance of self-abnegation bordering upon absolute folly comes to us from Jackson, Mich., A male unfortunate rashly importunate sought death via morphine, but two men intercepted him en route, gave him an emetic, pumped cold water on him, and forcibly jerked him around until all danger was over. Who were those good Samaritans? Were they ministers of religion, members of the Y. M. C. A., or Sunday school teachers? No. One—would you have thought it!—was a coroner and the other a reporter! One deprived himself of a fee and some professional pleasure, the other sacrificed what is dearer than all else to the reporterial heart, a firstclass "death by poisoning" sensation. We have known reporters who were tolerably good men, as men go, and we have heard of coroners who would not commit murder for the sake of one instance of selfdenial under strong temptation which we commend to the attention of those cynics who profess to have lost faith in human nature.—Spec.

YES HAPPY.—A London, England firm has discovered the malleable glass of the past, which is so annealed that it will bend instead of breaking. Fancy the consequences. The trade must suffer; for the percentage of glass broken yearely in a household is something startling. Housewives will no longer groan at the breaking of lamp-chimneys, nor sigh for the return of the tallow candle era, when petroleum and glass chimneys were unknown. One looks towards the coming into use of the great discovery with eagerness, for it will make an era in domestic industry, while its effects on domestic morality will be wondrous, inasmuch as maids will be spared the necessity of telling fibs, and sitting down to the credit of the cat all that was smashed. If the porcelainists will do likewise with cup-and-saucer ware, we shall become happy race.

THE NEW BASE BALL RULES.—This week's Clipper contains the first of a series of articles on proposed amendments to the playing rules of base ball for 1876. It indicates that the pitching and batting rules need reconstructing, and it urges a complete change in the composition of the ball. The proposed new ball must be of the same weight and size as that allowed by the present rules, but it must be made entirely of woilen yarn, the ounce of rubber forming the basis in the past being dispensed with. This will ensure a really dead ball, and to make it still more available for good fielding a cover of red or dark material is strongly recomended.

BADLAUHG.—Mr. Charles Bradlaugh is in New York. It is true that the equivalent of $130,000 has been bequeathed to him by an admirer in England, but the will is contested by persons who claim to possess a document of a more recent date in their own favor. The deceased gentleman seems to have died from the effects of poison, and it is asserted that what purports to be the latest will is a forgery. Those who benefit by it have offered to compromise with Mr. Bradlaugh, but he decline on the ground that he will have nothing to do with suspected poisoners. The case is exciting a great deal of interest in England.

THAT LEGAL SQUABBLE.—The Perth Expositor says that some are running away with the idea that after the late trial of Buck & Stewart's men, any one can pull down Mr. McLaren's dams. In this they are mistaken; the effect of the verdict was only that the prosecution should have been by a civil suit, and not as a criminal matter. No one has a right to remove any obstruction unless it does him a special injury, and then only to such an extent as may allow him to pass without harm to his person or property.
