Live Stock Report

While cattle on the Toronto market on Tuesday dipped lower, calves and hogs moved on, registering gains of 50c and 10c, respectively. The hog gain made up for Monday's 10c loss. Receipts were light on all grades, with the heavies run on the hog division, where 830 head were received. Lambs closed steady at the week's decline, while sheep trade was slow throughout the day.

Butcher cattle moved between $4.75 and $5 for choice and down to $3.50 for common. Weighty steers sold at $3.75 to $5.35, with cows mostly at $2.50 to $3.50. Bulls sold at $3 for tops, while a few fed calves brought $4.50 to $6. Good stockers went from $2.75 to $3.20.

The light run of calves resulted in active buying and the price jumped 50c to $5.50 to $6 for choice vealers, and $3 to $5 for common to medium kinds. Hogs closed 10c higher at $8.50, f.o.b. for bacons, $8.85 off truck and $9.25 off car.

Lambs closed steady at $5.50 to $9 per cwt., with a few tops going at $9.25. Sheep trade was draggy, with the bulk of the supply going from $1 to $2 per cwt., according to quality.

Barn Burned When Struck By Lightning

Struck by lightning during the electric storm early Sunday morning the large barn on the farm of Mr Sam McMullen was burned to the ground. Within a few moments after being struck the entire building was a seething mass of fire. One calf was burned besides a threshing separator, owned by Mr. Fred McMullen, manure spreader, fanning mill, cutting box, all the harness and halters for two teams of horses and other barn equipment. Considerable hay and straw were in the mows, but only a few hundred bushels of grain.

The barn was one of the largest in Artemesia, being 56x90 feet with stabling underneath the entire structure. The stables were also equipped with a litter carrier and the barn was fitted with lightning rods. There was $2500 insurance on the barn and about $700 on the contents, besides insurance on the separator.

Mr. McMullen had already risen with the approach of the storm and when the lightning struck he looked out the window and saw the light in the barn. He rushed out and found the fire too far advanced to be checked and he immediately went below to the stables, released and shoved two of the three calves from the building but was unable to bring the third out. All the horses and cattle were out on pasture at the time. The wind was fortunately in the right direction to carry burning shingles away from the other buildings, although water had to be used to save the driving shed close by.

U.F.O. PICNIC FRIDAY

This Friday the 8th annual U.F.O. picnic will be held in Clifford Young's grove, opposite the hospital at Durham. Afternoon sports will be presented, consisting of a softball game between Dundalk and Durham girls; men's softball tournament between Elmwood, Priceville and Williamsford and a baseball game between two good teams. Two concerts will be given by Willie Bell Concert Company, consisting of five members and addresses will be delivered by Miss Agnes Macphail, M.P., and F. R. Oliver, M.P.P. As a climax to the evening, dancing will be to the fore with music supplied by the popular Clifford Orchestra. The whole big program for an admission charge of 25 cents, with children under 12 free.

Meaford Wizard Accepts Offer of Chicago Fair

Andrew A. Gawley, "the man with the steel hands," left for the Chicago Century of Progress Exposition today, after reconsidering an offer he turned down a week ago.

Gawley will interview officials of the organization seeking his services and is expected to remain at the Exposition making steel hands for unfortunate persons similarly afflicted as himself.

Gawley, whose name and feats of dexterity with his steel hands, became widely known when the story of his accomplishments was published a few weeks ago, fell across a whirling buzz-saw when 17 years old. His arms were severed between the elbow and wrist.

While he suffered in the hospital he planned the "steel hands"—hands that could do almost everything human hands could perform.

After he left the hospital his blind father and himself worked for weeks and succeeded in cutting, grinding and filing the "hands" from hard steel. Since then Gawley has made dozens of hands for others.

For 30 years Gawley has made these hands, though the work is slow and tedious. In his little machine shop in Meaford, where he has managed to make a living, he works day and night, unaided. He works with only common tools, including a small drill, and finds it necessary to "fit" every hand for seldom are there two alike.

Tourists and visitors at Gawley's little workshop stand and gaze for hours at the "impossible" things he can do, from lifting and drinking from the most fragile piece of China to splitting wood and pulling an engine apart. Gawley has a powerful grip with both hands, and has been known to lift more deadweight than the man with ordinary arms. He is a mechanic by trade, and he will attempt any job.

For the past fifteen years he has repaired lawnmowers, bicycles, engines, and all sorts of machinery. His "steel hands" are simple, with five strong grips of different degrees of power. He can crush a stone to powder, break wire, tie his shoe laces, dress himself, and eat with knife and fork.

He is as speedy with his work as any skilled mechanic. He can respoke a bicycle wheel and insert the hub in less than thirty minutes. He has taken a motorcycle apart and put it together again. He can drive a motorcycle as well as a motor car, and frequently rides a bicycle. He can write with pen or pencil, and boasts of a good handwriting style.

Gawley's father, who died four years ago, was blind for more than fifty years and never saw his son.

Gawley finds time in summer to go out on Georgian Bay for pleasure trips. He starts and operates a gasoline launch alone, catches and lands a trout, brings it home, and cooks it.

He said before leaving for Chicago he had been swamped with letters from all over the North American Continent from persons who have lost their arms. Most of the letter-writers ask about the cost of the hands; others want to know if the published stories of Gawley's accomplishments are true. Increduloos photofraphers have visited him. Gawley receives them all pleasantly, and is proud he can earn his own living. If he remains at Chicago he hopes to do more for humanity.
