GROCERIES.

"She Looketh Well

to the ways of her household." Yes, Solomon is right; that's what the good housekeeper everywhere does, but particularly in Canada.

But her ways are not always old ways. In fact she has discarded many unsatisfactory old ways. For instance, to-day she is using the New Shortening, instead of lard. And this is in itself a reason why "she looketh well" in another sense, for she eats no lard to cause poor digestion and a worse complexion.

COTTOLENE is much better than lard for all cooking purposes, as every one who has tried it declares. Have you tried it?

A CLEVER CONVICT

Prentice Tiller Has Been Partially Successful In His Career of Crime.

The cleverest escape in the history of the Jackson (Mich.) penitentiary was made recently by Prentice Tiller, who was serving a seven years' sentence under the name of Charles H. Price. Tiller was employed in packing snacks in boxes to ship to Australia. He left out half of one lot, made a false top for the box, which he fastened in by means of wooden buttons on the inside, and had himself carted to the car platform outside the prison. When the coast was clear, he opened the box and escaped. He had made two other attempts and was caught in the act.

PRENTICE TILLER.

Tiller has had an interesting career. In 1885 he robbed the Pacific Express company of $100,000. He was a clerk in the express office and one Sunday night took $100,000, which was to be shipped from the city. He placed the money in two valises and left the office, traversing the principal streets to a private room which he had rented. Here he remained for several days, while the entire detective department was making a search for him.

After several days he went to Milwaukee, where he was captured and by his own carelessness. He entered a trunk store with only one valise, which contained over $100,000, and purchased a trunk. He instructed the clerk to have the trunk sent to a certain address which he gave and to place the valise in the trunk when he sent it. He left the trunk store, leaving the valise that contained the money behind him. The clerk in moving the valise must have handled it rather roughly, for it came open, and to his amazement and astonishment nothing but money of all descriptions stared him in the face. He at once notified the police department of the matter, and Tiller was arrested. He was returned to St. Louis and sentenced to seven years in the Missouri penitentiary.

After graduating at the Jefferson City institution, Tiller joined a gang that gained unenviable notoriety by robbing street letter boxes in a number of western cities. He was captured at Detroit in 1890 and sent to the prison at Jackson.

THE SOLDIER NUN.

She Masqueraded as a Man and Performed Many Daring Deeds.

In this prosaic and skeptical age it is hard to find people who are ready to accept without several grains of salt the story of the romantic and adventurous career of Catalina de Erauso, the Spanish soldier nun. And yet her memoirs are very well authenticated and have been believed by popes and kings, nobles and savants.

Catalina, we are told, ran away from a nunnery in San Sebastian at the age of 15, transformed her conventual habiliments into doublet and hose and found employment as a page in the household of a noble at Valladolid. Driven from this refuge by the appearance of her father, who had no suspicion, nevertheless she joined an expedition sailing to Peru under charge of Don Ferdinand de Cordova. Her ship was wrecked off Paita, and she alone refused to desert the captain, who stood by his vessel. Catalina then built a little raft, broke open the treasure chest, took as much gold as she could carry and set off for the shore, but the captain was drowned in embarking. She reached the town and accepted an engagement as manager to the tailor who made her new clothes. Complications of business and passion—for a great lady fell in love at sight—led to a first duel, in which she killed her man promptly. The great lady smuggled her out of prison, but Catalina found it necessary to repay this service by pushing the dame down stairs, probably breaking her neck. Then she jumped into a boat, put to sea and was picked up by a Spanish vessel bound for Concepcion.

At this place her brother was secretary to the governor, and he, all unconscious of the relationship, got her a position in the army. Very soon afterward she distinguished herself in an engagement and for 12 years ranked as one of the most brilliant officers of the Spanish service, living mostly with her brother, but keeping the secret. This happy time came to an end in a midnight duel, when she killed a man unknown, who proved to be this same brother. Flying for life once more, Catalina crossed the Andes. All her companions perished, but she reached Tucuman after terrible adventures.

Another love affair all on one side and another fatal duel brought her literally to the gallows, but with the rope round her neck she escaped. Traveling on to Cuzco, she joined an alcalde with a pretty wife and a gentleman, his friend. In a very few days Catalina perceived that these two had an understanding. The alcade perceived it also and took an opportunity to murder his faithless friend. He would have murdered his wife, but Catalina snatched her to the saddle and rode furiously for Cuzco. The alcade pursuing, she ran him through, but received a desperate wound. The fugitives got safe to the bishop's palace. Catalina knew, however, that her secret must be discovered now. She had just strength enough to reveal it to the bishop before fainting. That worthy man reported the whole story to the king, who sent orders that Catalina should be dispatched by the next ship. All Spain declared for the heroine. At her arrival Count Olivarez himself, the prime minister, met her; the king kissed her; the pope sent for her and forgave her; Valesquez painted her portrait.

What It Might Be.

Mrs. Meadow (at city hotel)—O-o-o! There's a fly in this soup.

Mr. Meadow (who has traveled some)—Hush, Miranda, don't speak so loud. No use exposin our ignorance. This tarnal bill of fare is in French, and mebby we ordered fly soup.—Life.

Turning the Tables.

"Please, sir, it was 9:20 when you got here. When we're late, you always keep us after school," said the smart boy.

"Very well," said the schoolmaster, "you shall all stay and keep me after school for an hour."—Tit-Bits.

At His Trade.

Mrs. Grum—Go about your business. We don't want any beggars round here.

Tramp—But begging is my business, ma'am.—Truth.

Elginburg Events.

ELGINBURG, June 27.—On a recent evening it was whispered through the key-hole of the parsonage, so to speak, that the services of a clergyman were needed at John Dougherty's hotel. In due time Rev. Mr. Shibley arrived and found a loving couple of middle age, who had just crossed from the other side, and longing to be made man and wife, but as the would-be husband could not produce a marriage license and also admitted that he had a living wife, from whom he had separated, the scrupulous minister could not see his way clear to say the few magic words that would have made two yearning hearts so happy. Now Samuel Richards is a young man of good sense and the best of morals, and when he concluded, one day last week, that the time had come when he should have one to share his joys and sorrows, he at once donned his best, and with prancing steeds and carriage gay, he soon had a rosy faced maiden, Miss Artilla Horning, nestling by his side and away he hie'd to the Cataraqui parsonage, and as the Rev. F. Chisholm thought everything looked propitious; and as they furthermore promised before witnesses to love and cherish each other till death, the good man could do no other than give them his blessing and pronounce them one. May they live long and be happy.

Its a boy, i.e. the recent arrival at George Armstrong's. Simon Jackson has lost his valuable cow. Mrs. Joshua Knight is home after a week with friends at Westbrook. Mrs. Armstrong, of Kingston, is visiting her former neighbors here. Miss L. Clogg, also of Kingston at J. Clogg's.

Considered The Best.

DEAR SIRS,—I also can bear testimony to the value of your wonderful remedy for the stomach, liver, bowels and blood, B.B.B. I have used it as well as Burdock Pills for over three years, when necessary, and find them the best remedies I have ever used for constipation. MRS. GREGOR, Owen Sound, Ont.
