THE INDULGENT MOTHER

OR TOO MUCH YIELDING TO THE WHIMS OF A CHILD.

The Results That May Come—Selfishness, Conceit and Untruthfulness the Certain Fruits—A Lesson to Parents.

What should we think of a person who cultivates a thistle by every winning effort of watering and care, and when it has grown to be a strong plant, repelling every one with its sharp thorns, showed surprise and disappointment that it had not the characteristics of a lily? This is exactly analagous to the conduct of many a mother in this strange world of ours. From thoughtlessness, or mistaken tenderness, she cultivates a crop of weeds worse than thistles, and is astonished and grieved when they come out in their true character at last.

The indulgent mother is so fond of her child that she cannot bear to refuse him anything and so shortsighted that she cannot see that she is doing him a serious injury.

Her work begins in the cradle, from her amiable desire that every one should admire and love him as she does, in taking great notice of him before others, in repeating his cunning doings, and, when older, his bright sayings, constantly talking about his dress and his ways—in a word, making the child and all his concerns the most conspicuous object in the house.

Few persons realize how early the baby begins to imbibe this sweet poison of praise and importance. Before he can talk he is robbed of a child's greatest charm, a sweet innocence, an unconsciousness of himself that wins all hearts. From self consciousness to conceit of his own importance is but a step, and then of course every whim must be gratified. We have all seen this vice in a baby before he could walk.

THEN LYING COMES.

When this crop of self will is well under way and flourishing, so that he becomes troublesome, comes in natural sequence the next step, untruthfulness. The willful infant prefers the presence and care of his mother, from whose hands he gets everything he wants (without the snubbing which he gets from his nurse). He screams when she goes away, she deceives him, and very soon deliberately prevaricates. "Oh, no!" she says. "Mamma won't go away," and the moment his attention is attracted she slips out, and does go. He does not notice or remember, you say? Does he not, indeed! Watch him and see.

When he is a little older and begins to ask questions, comes a fresh set of lessons in untruth from the parent who can't bear to refuse anything, even information. There is an old proverb, "A fool can answer questions a philosopher cannot answer," and how much easier it is for a bright child, with eager mind opening to all the wonders around him and craving to know about everything. It is pitiful to see the childlike confidence in the wisdom of parents abused—to see absolute untruth taken into the earnest mind and cherished as truth.

How sadly often do we see parents, when asked questions they are unable to answer, invent a ridiculous story which the unsuspecting child absorbs greedily, as perfectly trustworthy. The infatuated parent, too, thinks it is funny—a joke—and often casts a cunning look around among the grown people present, as if proud of the work.

A TERRIBLE LESSON.

In doing thus two things are lost sight of—first, that the child has reason, and, second, that he soon grows up. It is not long before he knows he is deceived and forms his judgment accordingly. Thus is learned a terrible lesson—that his mother, or his father (for fathers are guilty here) does not tell the truth. Now there is no reason why a mother should pretend to know everything. Soon enough the child sees for himself that she does not. How much better, then, to take a dignified position at first and retain the child's respect by admitting frankly that she does not know, though at the same time she should honestly try to find out.

Not to speak of the result of indulgence on the health by means of improper food and habits, which particular form of baby killing any honest physician will admit is far from uncommon—nor, somewhat later, of bad associates which the mother cannot control—how does this victim of an indulgent mother fare when he goes out into the world with no mistaken mother as a buffer between himsand life?

THE SAD RESULT.

As a child he is disliked and avoided by every one; as he grows he is the dread of teachers, and he is snubbed by his employers—when he gets them. When he reaches manhood, having no true ideas of life and his own insignificant place in it, filled with conceit and self assurance, he makes few friends, and he has the almost impossible task of learning at great cost (if he learns at all) what would have come with ease in childhood. It is like sending a boy out into the world full grown without knowing his letters—he has to educate himself.

A mother should have tender and loving, but firm, control of her child from his first breath. She should as carefully shield him from self consciousness, conceit and wilfulness as she does from scarlet fever and whooping cough. She should, above all things, set him a daily example of justice and truthfulness in the smallest affairs. In most cases the mother herself is the victim of bad training, and her duty is first with herself. Only by taking the matter seriously in hand, and trying to overcome her weakness, can the conscientious mother hope to avoid passing on her own faults to the next generation, to produce a fresh crop of noxious weeds in her grandchildren.—Olive Thorne Miller.

Casabianca's Lack.

The air with smoke was blue.
But no one one asked him—blessed lot—

Business Maxims.

The elder Bagon Rothschild had the walls of his bank placarded with the following curious maxims:

Carefully examine every detail of your business.

Be prompt in everything.

Take time to consider and then decide quickly.

Dare to go forward.

Bear troubles patiently.

Be brave in the struggle of life.

Maintain your integrity as a sacred thing.

Never tell business lies.

Make no useless acquaintances.

Never try to appear something more than you are.

Pay your debts promptly.

Learn how to risk your money at the right moment.

Shun strong liquor.

Employ your time well.

Do not reckon upon chance.

Be polite to everybody.

Never be discouraged.

Then work hard and you will be certain to succeed!—Scientific American.

A Cure for Constipation and Headache.

Dr. Silas Lane, while in the Rocky Mountains, discovered a root that when combined with other herbs, makes an easy and certain cure for constipation. It is in the form of dry roots and leaves, and is known as Lane's Family Medicine. It will cure sick headache. For the blood, liver and kidneys, and for clearing up the complexion it does wonders. Druggist sell it at 50c a package—enough for five weeks.

A Curious Duel.

Some years ago a duel, which was much talked about, took place between Mr. G—— and Mr. S——. The former had only one eye, the latter was short-sighted, and, to make matters worse, there was a dense fog at the time. The first ball killed a bird, and the second a rabbit. The witnesses put a stop to the proceedings, declaring that honor was satisfied.

"Pray was that" inquired A——.

"Faith, they began to be alarmed for their own safety."—Le Figaro.

Baby Was Sick.

DEAR SIRS,—My baby was very sick with diarrhœa, and everything we tried failed. But on trying Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry we found it gave prompt relief and very soon cured him completely.

NO TIME TO WRITE.

A Brief Note From "The Household Drudge" to Her "Lord and Master."

INDEED the lot of woman is hard. Has it not been dinned into our ears since we were young?

She is the slave and serf of selfish man. Here is the work that never ends. She is the one who, to give ease and comfort to her worst half, the brute! and let him dally in the lap of ease and luxury, must sacrifice her young life, her beautiful hands, her everything else and carry one on the altar of work.

At the very hottest curl of the hot wave I picked up a letter in the street which bore eloquent testimony to these pathetic facts. I hate to print it, because it bears so heavily upon the laziness of paterfamilias and the ease and luxury with which he surrounds himself at the expense of his family. I do not like to give my own sex away, as it were. But the stern sense of duty nerves me on. So here goes.

BERKSHIREVILLE, Mass, Aug. 4, 1892.

MY OWN DEAREST, DARLING HUBBY.—You do not know how lonely we all are without you. Why don't you just drop your hateful business and come up here for a week or two? I am sure the old store would keep right on running if you were not in it.

Did you send the check for fifty dollars for the board last week. It has not put in an appearance.

It seems dreadfully stupid here. There are only three or four nice young men in the place. Of course I have no trouble in keeping them out of the hands of the young girls, for they know that I have no designs upon them, and feel correspondingly at ease in my society. Besides, I rather think they like me.

Those children will be the death of me yet. Here am I trying to economize and they all the time making trouble and expense. I have just paid a sewing woman two dollars for mending their stockings and putting new seats in their pants. Last night Raphael knocked over one of the Etruscan ewers in my bedchamber. The landlord says he regrets exceedingly the accident, as the set was a very rare one, and he shall be forced to put down ten dollars in my bill for the broken pitcher.

It has been awfully hot here, and we have suffered dreadfully. If Mother Eve had been here last night I verily believe she would have slept without the fig leaf. I envy you the big, cool house in the city all to yourself.

Calipso broke my bottle of hair bleacher last night. Wish you would go to Madame Reubens and get another bottle and send it up by express. While you are about it you might as well have her put up the usual set of toilet necessities, the $15.50 set, as I am nearly out. She will understand.

We had a delightful excursion yesterday to Hornswoggle Mountain and picnicked in the glen. A mosquito bit me just between the shoulders, where I could not possibly reach it to scratch, and I suffered excruciating agonies all night. I was just able to reach it with my shoehorn, and that was all. The man charged $16 for the wagon, and as I had so many children I had to pay half. Isn't the price rather high? By the way, I am all out of money, and if you want me to do what is right and proper by the collection plate you must send me some right away.

There is going to be a grand hop here next Saturday and I have positively nothing fit to wear. I wish you would get the pearl colored slippers out of the second drawer in the back room bureau. Take them to Blank's and ask them to match the color with some of their gros grain $3.50 silk and send to me at once. There is a very nice and killingly cheap dressmaker here, and I guess with prompt work on your part that we will pull through.

I have signed a subscription paper for $5 to put a new coat of paint on the Episcopal church here. Please send check for the amount. It looks more respectable to give in that shape, and there is no mistake about the donor. Make check payable to me so I can indorse it.

You poor, dear boy! I wish I had time to write you a nice, long letter, but I have been invited by Jack Assford to take a ride to Blumtum Mountain, and so for today you must put up with this horrid little scrawl. You must be dreadfully forlorn keeping bachelor's hall without a servant, and yet I suppose we must economize until you get a rise of salary. I almost died laughing at your description of how you sleep in an unmade bed and try to cook over that horrid little gas stove.

Elsie, my nurse maid, said this morning that she wanted to go back to the city. She seemed quite set on going, and I had to bribe her with an offer of $5 more a month in order to keep her. It would be impossible to get a girl here.

Well, good-by. There are several little commissions I wanted you to do for me, but Mr. Assford is calling now and I have not got the time to think of them.

Your lonely little wife,

EVANGELINE.

As I read this pathetic and sorrowful little missive tears came to my eyes. I pictured the round shouldered, bald headed little brute to whom it was addressed, and I wanted to shake him and say "You tyrant! Are you not ashamed to live in luxury and ease while your devoted wife, the mother of your seven children, is wearing out her young life among the Berkshires?"—New York Herald.

For Business Men—Life in Every Drop.

In these days of competition and rushing ahead, men are inclined to forget the needs of the body and keep continually on the race track of work, commerce and science, until the constitution is broken down. Men may continue for years in this rush after riches and fame without apparent detriment to health, but the day of reckoning comes as surely as night follows day. The laws of nature have been severely transgressed. The ordinary rules of sensible living have been neglected or cast aside. The body has been overworked, the brain has been overtaxed and subjected to too great a strain, sleep and rest have been neglected and improperly used.

What do we find as the result of this mad and suicidal course of living? Human wrecks on the great sea of life! Men left helpless, broken up, and many of them just approaching the grave.

It is for such subjects as these that we honestly and strongly recommend the use of Paine's Celery Compound, a remedy specially adapted to meet such terrible conditions. Experience in our land has amply proved the value of the agent so earnestly recommended. Its works speak louder than columns of newspaper matter; its wonderful cures are sufficient evidences of its priceless worth.

Hundreds of business men in Canada, today, owe their present good health to the marvellous powers of Paine's Celery Compound; they candidly acknowledge its honesty and curative properties.

Our object is simply to bring to the notice of all who are in danger, the fact that there is an unfailing agent they may use, and by which they may obtain a new life and extended years.

Paine's Celery Compound has no equal; no other medicine can take its place and do its work; it is the only one of its kind in the world. Try it, sufferer; one bottle will convince you that you have found truth and honesty; in every drop there is new life.

Out of the Pan.

Sea Captain—Yes, I want a boy but I think you look a runaway. Now ain't you? Didn't ye run away from home?

Boy—Ye-ye-y-e-s, but I couldn't help it. They was going to send me to a dentist to have six teeth filled.

"They was, was they? Well, I'd a'run off too. I don't believe in fillin' teeth."

"No, sir; I don't either."

"Of course not. You come on aboard with me, and if anything's wrong with your teeth the carpenter can take 'em out with a monkey wrench."

Boy went home.

Diarrhœa and Vomiting.

GENTLEMEN,—About five weeks ago I was taken with a very severe attack of diarrhœa and vomiting. The pain was almost unbearable and I thought I could not live till morning, but after I had taken the third dose of Fowler's Wild Strawberry the vomiting ceased, and after the sixth dose the diarrhœa stopped, and I have not had the least symptom of it since.

STILL ANOTHER ECHO.

FROM BROCKVILLE AS TO THE REMARKABLE CURATIVE POWERS OF SALVATOR MAGNUS.

Mrs. W. H. Breakell Raised From a Bed of Suffering After Medical Treatment and Various Remedies Had Failed—She Attributes Her Cure Altogether to the Use of This Great Remedy.

Brockville Times, August 25th.

This is an age of wonderful development in every branch of scientific research, but in none have the discoveries been more remarkable than in the treatment of the many diseases to which flesh is heir. Of recent achievements in this direction there is no one that takes a more prominent place than "Salvator Magnus." Through its use some of the most remarkable cures known to the world have been effected. Readers of the newspapers have been made acquainted with a number of the more notable cures effected by this wonderful medicine after all other remedies had failed. Among them may be mentioned the cases of T. P. Sparham and Robt. Gibbons in Brockville, that of Merritt Wilkinson, of Leamington, upon whom his father spent $500 in treatment but in vain, and who was cured of a disease of eleven years standing by three bottles of this remedy and of the most miraculous rescue from the jaws of death of C. R. Stratton, of Grand Rapids, Mich., and of George E. Bristan, of San Diego, Cal. Such remarkable cases of cure as these have given the wonderful medicine a reputation all over the continent of America, and that it never fails to cure the diseases for which it is a specific is attested to by the rapidly increasing demand there is for it.

Another instance of remarkable cure through the agency of this medicine having come to the knowledge of the Times a representative of the paper proceeded to make enquiry regarding it. The party who had been raised from a sick bed by the use of Salvator Magnus and restored to health is a lady well-known in Brockville, Mrs. W. H. Breakell, Wall street. After being treated by the most skilful physicians without receiving any benefit, and after trying various preparations which did her no good, she tried Salvator Magnus, with the result that she has been restored to perfect health. The story of her remarkable cure, as told by herself, is as follows. In conversation with the Times representative she said:

"Towards the latter end of last year I was completely run down and prostrated with nervous debility. I had medical advice and also tried several remedies which were recommended to me, but none of them had any effect. I had almost given up in despair when four or five months ago I happened to read of the merits of Salvator Magnus and of certain cures that had been effected by its use, and as a last resort decided to give it a trial. After taking one bottle I felt so much better that I decided to continue it. I have kept on improving every day since I commenced taking the medicine. I have now taken seven bottles; I feel almost as well as ever and am confident that a couple of bottles more will effect a complete cure. I feel better than I have for years and I attribute it all to Salvator Magnus. My case was certainly a serious one. Among the aggravated symptoms was a profuse bleeding at the nose, attended with severe frontal pain immediately over the eyes. The bleeding ceased altogether shortly after I began using the Magnus, and the pain has almost entirely disappeared. I cannot too strongly recommend Salvator Magnus to any who may be afflicted as I was, and am confident, if used according to directions, it will effect a complete cure."

Mr. Breakell was also seen and he fully corroborated all that Mrs. Breakell had said regarding her wonderful restoration to health.

Such is the testimony of a lady of our own town regarding what Salvator Magnus has done for her. What it has done for one it will certainly do for others.

This medicine is manufactured by the Salvator Medicine Co., of Brockville, Ont., or Morristown, N.Y., who also manufacture that unrivalled cough mixture, Magnus Expectorant, and the Magic Pile Lotion. These remedies are for sale by all respectable druggists.

He Could Not Get Away.

A weary old man dropped with a sigh into a seat in the street car. At the other end three or four young men were talking and laughing.

"They have just returned from their vacation," said the tired man to his next neighbor.

"They seem to have enjoyed it."

"Yes, they seem to. They work in the same store as I do."

"Ah!"

"Yes. They have all been away now—everybody in the store—clerks, bookkeepers, and heads of departments, even the cash boys and the wrappers and the porters. Everybody has had his vacation—but me."

"All but you?"

"Yes."

"Well, I should think your employer would let you off too."

The old man shook his head.

"What's the reason he won't?"

"Well," replied the weary man, with another sigh, "you see, I'm the proprietor myself."

The "Army" in Business.

The Salvation Army has come to the front in a new phase in London. Among the items of city news in one of the large metropolitan dailies we find the following: "At the meeting of the School Board yesterday, on the recommendation of the Works Committee, it was resolved that the tender of the Salvation Army for the supply of firewood at 2s. 8d. per 100 bundles be accepted."

The Great Star "Salvator Magnus" Is Not a Planet.

But it is a new and powerful remedy for consumption and all diseases of the lungs and we defy the world to point to anything else in the form of medicine or medical treatment that can show such a record or such a list of marvellous cures, even in the far advanced stages, as Salvator Magnus. For sale at all drug stores in the city.

Extract of His Knowledge.

Mamma—Helen, how did you happen to allow Mr. Gordon to kiss you when you were out fishing yesterday?

Helen—Why, mamma, I just asked him if he had ever been a sailor, and he said he was enough of a one to know how to manage a fishing smack.
