PHILIP AT SAMARIA.

LESSON X, THIRD QUARTER, INTERNATIONAL SERIES, SEPT. 4.

Text of the Lesson, Acts viii, 5-25—Memory Verses, 5-8—Golden Text, Acts viii, 5—Commentary on the Lesson by Rev. D. M. Stearns.

5. "Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them." By comparing verses 4, 12, 25 with this verse we obtain considerable light as to what was preached in those days: the Word, the Gospel, Christ, the things concerning the kingdom; and if we compare chapters ii, 38; x, 36, 42, 43; xvii, 18, 32, we will find that their preaching included repentance, forgiveness, peace, resurrection and judgment.

6. "And the people with one accord gave heed." Just eleven times in this book do we find the phrase, "with one accord" (i, 14; ii, 1, 46; iv, 24; v, 12; vii, 57; viii, 6; xii, 20; xv, 25; xviii, 12; xix, 29); and only once elsewhere in the New Testament is the word used (Rom. xv, 6, R.V). Seven times in the Acts it is "one accord" for good, and these seven make a most profitable study. It is the manifest power of the Holy Spirit.

7. "Many taken with palsies and that were lame were healed." These, in addition to the unclean spirits which were cast out, are a sample of the miracles wrought by God through Philip, which constrained the people to give heed to his words.

8. "And there was great joy in that city." This is always the result of receiving Jesus. Those who believe—that is, receive—Him (John i, 12) will be filled with joy and peace (Rom. xv, 13), and it is His pleasure that we should be full of joy (John xv, 11; xvi, 24).

9. "But there was a certain man called Simon giving out that himself was some great one." The adversary is always busy, and you can always recognize him by the prominence he gives himself. This is the spirit of antichrist.

10. "To whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God." A great following is no proof that a man is right, nor are few followers necessarily an evidence that a man is wrong. Consider Noah, Jeremiah and the prophets, and think of Jesus Himself (John vi, 66).

11. "He had bewitched them with sorceries." So it has been, is and will be till Jesus comes. Jesus speaks of signs by false teachers in the last days that shall if possible deceive the elect (Matt. xxiv, 24), and we read in Rev. xiii, 3, 8, of multitudes worshiping the beast, and in II Thes. ii, 9-12 of those who prefer a lie to the truth.

12. "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women." The reception of the truth is the cure for all deception. They not only heard, but they received the truth, or rather they received Jesus, who is the truth (John xiv, 6; I John v, 11, 12). The entrance of the word giveth light (Ps. cxix, 130).

13. "Then Simon himself believed also; and when he was baptized he continued with Philip." The power of God is able to break the hardest heart. Some doubt whether this was a real case of true conversion or not.

14, 15. "Peter and John prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost." Word having reached Jerusalem of the great work going on in Samaria, Peter and John were sent to help, and inasmuch as they had received the word, they give themselves to prayer that they may now receive the Holy Spirit.

16. "For as yet He was fallen upon none of them; only they were baptised in the name of the Lord Jesus." Having believed and been baptized they were consequently saved (Mark xvi, 16; John i, 12; iii, 16; v, 24). But we are saved to serve and live unto God.

17. "Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost." So also at Ephesus Paul laid his hands on twelve men who had believed and they received the Holy Ghost and prophesied (chapter xix, 6, 7). There is evidently a gift of the Spirit for saved people for service of which we hear comparatively little; and yet there is a plain command to "Be filled with the Spirit" (Eph. v, 18). See the way in Luke xi, 13.

18, 19. "Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands he may receive the Holy Ghost." We now return to Simon, of whom we read in verse 13 that he believed, was baptised and continued with Philip wondering and beholding. And now he offers money that he may obtain this power to confer the spirit. He does not seek power to serve God in humility, (xx, 19), but rather seeks to be a great one and have power to give.

20. "Thy money perish with thee because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money." He did not know Isaiah lv, 1, nor Luke xi, 13, and yet he was like a great many even now who think that by doing so much or giving so much they can obtain gifts from God.

21. "Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter, for thy heart is not right in the sight of God." If he had no part in Christ he was not saved; but if Peter meant that he had no part in this gift of the Holy Spirit, he was just in the condition in which most of our church members are, and reference to serving God his heart was not right.

22. "Repent therefore of this thy wickedness; and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee." Praise God for His forgiveness and mercy and plenteous redemption (Ps. cxxx, 4, 7; ciii, 8). He also gives repentence (chapter v, 31). Notice that thoughts must be forgiven, for the thought of foolishness is sin (Prov. xxiv, 9).

23. "For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness and in the bond of iniquity." If he was truly saved it would seem that he would have peace instead of bitterness and rejoice in the blotting out of his iniquities.

24. "Pray ye to the Lord for me that none of these things which ye have spoken came upon me!" This request of Simon's to be prayed for gives us some encouragement, but the object of his request makes us wonder if we shall meet him. He is not a comfortable study, and alas! he has many followers. It is himself from first to last.

25. "Preached the word of the Lord, preached the Gospel." Thus did Peter and John on their way back to Jerusalem. They have no thought of themselves, but only a consuming desire to make Jesus known.

BULL AGAINST LION.

A Conflict That Ended Disastrous For the King of Beasts.

"The lion has been called the king of beasts, but I will back a bull of good fighting stock against anything that wears hair," said C. W. Courtright at the Southern.

"I was travelling in Mexico a few years ago, and at Monterey a little one-ring circus with menagerie attachment was exhibiting. In the outfit was a large and ferocious-looking lion, which was proclaimed as the terror of the animal creation. A Mexican cattle man was an interested spectator, and while the tent was full he mounted a seat and offered to bet the proprietor of the show $1,000 that he had a bull that could whip the lion in ten minutes. The wager was accepted and the next day set for the battle in the local bull pen. The lion was turned loose in the inclosure and a young lamb thrown to him. He killed and ate it and the taste of blood seemed to make him frantic. Then a black, wiry, Spanish bull was turned in. Without a moment's hesitation the lion sprang at him, but taurus caught him on his needle-like horns and threw him thirty feet. The lion did not appear anxious to resume hostilities, but the bull was in for a fight to a finish. He rushed at his enemy and gave him another savage toss. The lion retired to the farthest corner of the inclosure and tried to scramble out, but was clubbed back. The bull made another rush, and this time he drove a horn into his antagonist and nearly disembowled him. Every bit of fight in the lion was gone. The bull stood in the center of the inclosure pawing and bellowing, and the terror of the animal kingdom was dragged out and an attempt made to save his life. The bull was boss from the moment he entered the arena."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

The Old Mosaic Law And Modern Living

The practical teachings of the old Mosaic law were of immense benefit to the ancient Jews; and, owing to their fairly rigid observance by the Jews of the present day, certain diseases and ailments common to christians are almost unknown in Jewish families.

Modern science cannot but admire the wisdom of the old law-giver in the days of old, who enjoined strict observance of the best sanitary rules ever heard of by men.

Owing to wise customs and laws our Jewish friends avoid that tormentor, dyspepsia; they know little of liver and kidney troubles; they know nothing of the terrors of sleeplessness which often lead to insanity.

Christians, however, who boast of their many advantages of civilization and their ascendancy in the arts and sciences, are the afflicted and tormented. With them dyspepsia, indigestion, constipation, weak nerves, imperfect circulation and sleeplessness are very common ailments; thousands suffer continually and thousands die from these causes. We do not give the care to health and strength that nature demands and expects; therefore we suffer.

Fortunate it is that a great mind and genius has given to the world a healer and renovator for the diseased and afflicted. The great Professor Phelps has given to suffering men and women a scientific prescription, now known as Paine's Celery Compound, which eradicates all the troubles just referred to.

By using Paine's Celery Compound the dyspeptic gets rid of his agonies and pains, and his digestion is made perfect. The sleepless one is enabled to obtain rest and sleep, so that mind and body are recuperated. The unfortunate sufferer whose blood is impure and sluggish by using the great remedy is soon blessed with pure blood and a free and natural circulation. In short, life is renewed and lengthened, and made happy and joyous.

The great wonder is that so many go on suffering from day to day, while such a remedy is so near them.

Bismarck Has a Good Appetite.

Bismarck, like all vigorous men, eats hearty, and what the distinguished gentleman consumes daily would kill any ordinary individual. The ex-Chancellor loves his dinners, and no one bestows more care on them than he does. His meals must be prompt and well served, with plenty of time to enjoy them in. One of his regular dinners consists of a mixture of champagne and porter to wash down all he consumes, and the rate at which he drinks his favorite mixture would paralyze any ordinary American. A quart at a time is a common occurrence. He consumes first a large quantity of highly spiced soup; yet, spiced as it is, he still adds a spoonful of ginger and mace. After this has disappeared, then a large piece of beef steeped in a half pint of brandy. Following comes a favorite German cheese dish, to which he adds the juice of garlic. This is baked in butter until it becomes hard. After this has gone to join the rest, he closes his feast with a medium-sized eel pie, "so hot, so fiery," that it would seem to have been baked in the hottest corner of our despised hades. This is followed closely by a chilled, unwholesome fowl and some sweet-meats, all being settled down and digested by the ponderous key of a quart bottle of iced Heidsieck. A wonderful meal, for a still wonderful man.

Novelist Black Likes Simplicity.

A writer of literary gossip says that William Black, the novelist, spends most of his working life in Paston house, at Brighton, a plain, substantial building and a handsome and compact residence. It was decorated and furnished under the personal superintendence of the novelist and his wife. Pleasant combinations on walls and floors of soft rugs of oriental hues, tiled fireplaces and high oaken mantles, wainscoted rooms, good pictures carefully hung, bits of "old blue" and reminiscences of travel in the shape of china, glass and bronze, and in all things an eye to comfort as well as picturesqueness is everywhere observable. But Mr. Black, like most working men, prefers simplicity in his workshop. His study is an apartment at the top of the house, far above all noise and disturbance of any kind. This study is described as a long room, one side of it filled with books, the other has his desk set between two windows that overlook Patson place, and at the same time command the channel, freighted with distant ships. The desk is very simply furnished with writing materials—a simple room, plain even to coldness. No luxurious rug or easy chair breaks the monotony of it, and no bit of color feeds the eye unless you look for it in nature's own pictures of sky and sea that are framed by the windows.

"Tired all the Time."

Is the complaint of many poor mortals, who know not where to find relief. Hood's Sarsaparilla possesses just those elements of strength which you so earnestly crave, it will build you up, give you an appetite, strengthen your stomach and nerves. Try it.

Hood's Pills act especially upon the liver, rousing it from torpidity to its natural duties, cure constipation and assist digestion.

Doomed Forever.

Miss Sharpe—I'd think your brother would show more attention to the girls than he does.

Miss Olde—Well, you see, he is under promise to me to act as my escort everywhere until I am married.

Miss Sharp—I shouldn't think he'd want to live a bachelor all his life.—Kate Field's Washington.
